Epics Come Alive at Mysore Palace; Historic Chandrashale Thotti Reopens with Grand Book Release After 50 Years

MYSURU

Mysore witnessed a memorable cultural evening as the fourth volume of the prestigious book series "Raja Ravi Varma: An Everlasting Imprint – The Epics Imagined" was ceremoniously released at the beautifully renovated historic Chandrashale Thotti auditorium within the Mysore Palace premises in the city.

Authored by Advocate Ganesh V. Shivaswamy, the richly curated volume was released under the aegis of the HH Sri Srikantadatta Narasimharaja Wadiyar (HHSNW) Foundation. The occasion was made even more special as Foundation Chairperson Pramoda Devi Wadiyar unveiled the book, marking the re-inauguration of the Chandrashale Thotti auditorium after a gap of nearly five decades.

Addressing the gathering, Pramoda Devi Wadiyar expressed immense happiness over the revival of the historic venue. She noted that it was a moment of pride that the auditorium's reopening was being celebrated through a literary and artistic event of such stature. She added that Chandrashale Thotti would henceforth serve as a vibrant space for cultural, literary and heritage-related programmes.

Speaking about the book, author Ganesh Shivaswamy said the fourth volume focuses on Raja Ravi Varma's epic-inspired paintings, particularly those drawn from the Ramayana and Mahabharata. He highlighted that one of the most significant works discussed in the volume is Ravi Varma's first-ever painting of 'Draupadi', which is currently housed at the Jaganmohan Palace Art Gallery.

The book, he explained, goes beyond documentation and seeks to re-analyse Ravi Varma's artistic genius, exploring his creative process, preparatory sketches, narrative depth and the powerful emotional engagement his paintings evoke in viewers.

Elaborating on the ambitious scope of the project, Shivaswamy said the series will eventually comprise six volumes, spanning 2,142 pages and featuring over 2,100 paintings. The first volume traces the evolution of the artist, revealing how Ravi Varma refined his style by keenly observing the world around him. The second volume explores how he used emerging technology to take art to the masses, while the third focuses on divine and spiritual themes. The newly released fourth volume, as announced earlier, delves into his epic narratives.

Highlighting the deep connection between Ravi Varma and Mysore Palace, Shivaswamy remarked that both the first and last paintings of Draupadi by the legendary artist are preserved at the Jaganmohan Palace, symbolising an enduring artistic bond.

The event also featured addresses by Rama Varma, a descendant of Raja Ravi Varma from Kilimanoor Palace, Kerala, and Ashwath Naroth, the designer of the book series. Mysore Palace Board Deputy Director T.S. Subramanya and several art lovers, scholars and dignitaries were present, making the evening a fitting tribute to an immortal artist and a revived heritage space.

Education Is Essential in Life – N. Srinivasan

Education is a crucial phase in every student's life. By pursuing quality education, achieving success with good results, and securing responsible positions in society, students should bring pride to their parents as well as to their schools and colleges, advised N. Srinivasan, Head of Sudarshan Vidya Institution.

He was speaking after distributing Merit Awards to students who passed the SSLC examination (2024–25) with high percentage marks, at a simple programme organised at Sudarshan Vidya Institution, located in KHB Colony, Hootagalli, Mysuru on Monday.

Srinivasan cautioned that negligence towards studies during academic life can lead to serious difficulties in the future. In the present times, even a single minute is extremely valuable. Proper preparation for examinations is absolutely essential. With employment opportunities shrinking in this highly competitive era, students must put in greater effort in their studies. Students never to forget their parents who gave them birth, the teachers who imparted knowledge, and the friends who stood by them during difficult times.

Srinivasan said that education is indispensable in life, as it builds knowledge, self-confidence and a strong personality. Education helps in the holistic development of an individual by enabling a better career, financial security, critical thinking and social skills. It dispels ignorance and paves the way for making sound decisions and building a better society.

On the occasion, encouragement scholarship cheques were distributed and best wishes were conveyed to students Ashwini, Soumya M.J., Bhuvant N., Gagan S., Janhavi, Ramya S., Sunitha S.R., Harshitha G., Soni T., and several others who secured good marks and passed the SSLC examination (2024–25) with distinction.

Present on the occasion were Head Teacher Suresh Kumar, Education Association representative Neha Prakash, Headmistress Vinutha, Head Teacher Uma, FDA Praveen, along with parents and members of the school staff.

Education Is Essential for Girls: K. Harish Gowda

MYSURU

Education is essential for girls to become economically self-reliant and to lead a dignified life in society. Parents must ensure that their daughters receive education, said Chamaraja Assembly Constituency MLA K. Harish Gowda.

Speaking after inaugurating the Madivala Machideva Jayanti celebration organized today at Kalamandira by the district administration, the Department of Kannada and Culture, and the Mysuru City Corporation here, he said that Vachanas impart lessons of moral values in life, teach respect for women and elders, and also guide people in shaping their lives. Machideva, along with all great Vachanakaras, should be remembered every day. Their Vachanas must be understood and adopted in day-to-day life. Social reform is possible through Vachanas.

The MLA assured that he would make sincere efforts to draw the government's attention to the demands submitted by the Madivala community. He would hold discussions on naming the Sheshadripuram Circle after Madivala Machayya.

MLC Dr. D. Thimmaiah said that in the 12th century, in Basavanna's Anubhava Mantapa, Vachanakaras from all sections of society came together without any discrimination of caste or hierarchy. Through Vachanas, they attempted to correct social evils and engaged in meaningful discussions. Vachanakaras such as Madivala Machayya, Ambigara Chowdayya, Haralayya, Dohara Kakkayya and others conveyed through their Vachanas the message of the dignity of labour, attainment of salvation through work, respect for every form of labour, and the creation of an egalitarian society. Just as dirty clothes are washed to become clean, if the mind is polluted with feelings of superiority and inferiority, people must first wash away such impurities. People should purify their body and mind, and everyone should become educated, he said.

Kannada Book Authority Chairman Dr. Manasa said that Jayanti celebrations should inspire people to follow the principles and ideals of the great personalities being commemorated. Such celebrations help people understand the origins and the value of the lives of great persons. Machayya earned the name Machideva through his work and conduct; Madivala Machideva demonstrated that a human being can also become divine. Through the principles of Kayaka (work), Bhakti (devotion) and Jnana (knowledge), the Vachanakaras strove for social reform.

Sharana discourse speaker Yadiyuru Mudalagiri said that Madivala Machayya was born in Devar Ipparige village of Sindagi taluk in present-day Vijayapura district. With the intention of helping the poor, he followed the path shown by Basavanna.

District President of the Guarantee Schemes Arun, along with dignitaries Mohammed Rafi, Manjunath, Channakeshava, B. G. Keshava, Ravinandhan, Manju Shetty, Siddapaji and several other leaders were present at the programme.

"No Safari at Any Cost" — Farmers, Green Activists Submit Strong Memorandum to Regional Commissioner

MYSURU

Opposing the proposed restart of safari activities in forest-sensitive zones, the Karnataka Rajya Raitha Sangha and Green Brigade have submitted a strong memorandum to the Regional Commissioner of Mysuru, Nilesh Patel on Monday, urging immediate intervention on several urgent environmental and public-interest issues.

The organisations categorically demanded that safari activities should not be resumed under any circumstances, stating that peace has returned to forest villages ever since the safari operations were halted.

According to the memorandum, whether the safari was termed "scientific" or "unscientific," forest villages have remained calm since its suspension. Notably, there have been no tiger or wildlife attack incidents during this period, reinforcing the claim that safaris disturb natural wildlife movement.

Activists warned that if the government proceeds with restarting the safari, they would be forced to launch a mass agitation, demanding the complete shutdown of Bandipur and Kabini safaris as well.

The memorandum further alleged that unauthorised encroachments have mushroomed in forest-sensitive zones and dam buffer areas, which are government and public properties meant for wildlife conservation. The groups demanded that all such encroachments be cleared strictly based on original land records and maps.

They also insisted on a comprehensive survey of properties owned by private individuals and commercial establishments operating in these zones, to determine the actual land owned versus land illegally used for commercial purposes.

Heavy Vehicles Inside Forest Raise Alarm

Raising serious concerns, the organisations questioned how permission was granted for the movement of heavy vehicles such as lorries and JCBs inside forest areas. While the forest department claims forest land is shrinking due to an increase in wildlife population, activists pointed out the contradiction of 5% to 7% of forest land being diverted for safari-related activities.

The use of heavy machinery, they said, is not only severely disturbing wildlife but also destroying the traditional livelihoods of Soliga tribals, forest herders, honey collectors, and bird-dependent communities.

The Raitha Sangha and Green Brigade urged the Regional Commissioner to act swiftly in the interest of wildlife conservation, forest-dependent communities, and the general public, and to ensure that forests remain protected spaces for nature—not commercial exploitation.

and other activities, leading to the loss of forest wealth. Protecting forests is the duty of every citizen. Students to develop a sense of responsibility from a young age by planting saplings on their own birthdays, family members' birthdays, and on special occasions, thereby ensuring that the environment remains lush and green.

Addressing the gathering, JDS Working President Prakash Priyadarshan said that education is the greatest asset in life. Every student should study well during their academic years, become educated, and bring pride to their parents. LS erupts over Rahul China remarks

Parliament descended into chaos as Rahul Gandhi's attempt to cite a magazine on China border issues triggered protests and adjournments on Monday

NEW DELHI

Heavy scenes unfolded in the Lok Sabha on Monday after Leader of Opposition Rahul Gandhi tried to quote from a magazine article that carried excerpts from the unpublished memoirs of former Army Chief General M.M. Naravane. Gandhi said the contents related to alleged Chinese activities along the border and raised concerns about national security and defence preparedness.

The Speaker stopped him, saying parliamentary rules do not allow members to quote from newspapers or magazines in the House. Ministers from the ruling side supported the ruling and objected to Gandhi's remarks. Defence Minister Rajnath Singh asked whether the book being referred to had even been officially published. Home Minister Amit Shah also said unverified material should not be used in Parliament.

Gandhi insisted he was referring to a published magazine report and questioned why the government was uncomfortable with the issue being discussed. He said the matter involving China was serious and that he had the right to respond to comments made earlier about his party's patriotism.

Samajwadi Party leader Akhilesh Yadav urged the Chair to allow the discussion, calling the border issue sensitive and important. Despite this, protests and loud sloganeering continued from both sides of the House.

The Lok Sabha was adjourned more than once as the ruckus refused to die down. When the House briefly reconvened, Gandhi again tried to raise the issue, but disruptions resumed. Eventually, the Speaker adjourned the House for the rest of the day, with no agreement reached and political tempers still running high.

The confrontation highlighted deep divisions between government and opposition over rules, transparency, and how national security matters should be discussed.

Lok Sabha witnessed repeated adjournments after Rahul Gandhi attempted to cite a magazine report quoting alleged excerpts from former Army chief M.M. Naravane's unpublished memoirs on China. The Speaker disallowed references, ministers objected, opposition protested, and disruptions forced the House to adjourn for the day amid loud protests and sloganeering.

- Rahul Gandhi raised concerns over China using a magazine article citing unpublished memoir excerpts
- Speaker ruled that newspapers or magazines cannot be quoted in the House
- Government questioned authenticity and national security implications
- Opposition insisted the issue was serious and deserved discussion
- Continuous protests led to multiple adjournments and loss of proceedings

CM Slams Centre, Defends Karnataka's Development Record

BENGALURU

Karnataka Chief Minister strongly criticized the Central Government while replying to the debate on the Governor's speech in the Assembly on January 22. He said the Governor left abruptly without completing the speech or mentioning "Jai Samvidhan," which, he added, was not appropriate.

The Chief Minister emphasized that his government is not against the Governor but opposes the Centre's policies, especially the renaming of MNREGA to "VB G Ram G." He pointed out that earlier leaders, including former CM H.D. Kumaraswamy, had supported similar schemes.

The Chief Minister also assured action against officers failing their duties and clarified that illegal Bangladeshis would not receive state benefits.

He concluded by rejecting criticism from BJP MLA Sunil Kumar, saying the government has fulfilled promises and provided a sensitive, people-focused administration. The Motion of Thanks on the Governor's Address was passed by both Houses on Monday.

Raut Raises Suspicion Over Ajit Pawar crash

MUMBAI

Shiv Sena UBT leader Sanjay Raut on Monday called the plane crash that killed Maharashtra Deputy Chief Minister Ajit Pawar suspicious and demanded a full and transparent investigation.

Speaking to reporters, Raut said questions were natural because of Pawar's political importance and the events that happened before the crash. He claimed that facts coming out after the incident point to something wrong and need serious attention. Raut alleged that Ajit Pawar had earlier expressed a wish to return home politically. He claimed that after this, BJP leaders threatened him using files related to the Sinchan scam. Raut said Pawar had answered those charges, but within ten days he died in what he described as a mysterious crash.

Drawing a comparison with the death of Justice B H Loya, Raut asked whether hidden forces were involved. He also said it was inhuman to discuss NCP leadership immediately after Pawar's death.

Meanwhile, Union Civil Aviation Minister Ram Mohan Naidu Kinjarapu said the aircraft black box has been recovered. He confirmed that the Aircraft Accident Investigation Bureau has started a probe and assured it would be fair, transparent, and time bound.

The crash occurred in Baramati on January twenty eight and also killed four others. The incident has triggered political reactions across Maharashtra.

Air India Dreamliner grounded over fuel switch

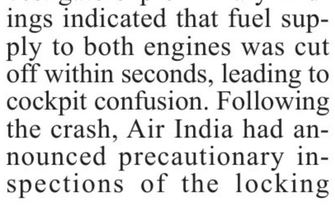
NEW DELHI

An Air India Boeing 787-8 Dreamliner scheduled for a London–Bengaluru flight was grounded before departure after a pilot reported a potential problem with the aircraft's fuel control switch during routine pre-flight checks. Airline sources said the aircraft was withdrawn as a precaution, and technical teams, along with the original equipment manufacturer, are examining the system on priority. Passengers were accommodated on alternative flights.

The grounding has drawn attention because fuel control switches were scrutinized after last year's June 2025 Air India crash near Ahmedabad, which killed 260 people, including 241 passengers. Investigators' preliminary findings indicated that fuel supply to both engines was cut off within seconds, leading to cockpit confusion. Following the crash, Air India had announced precautionary inspections of the locking mechanisms across its Boeing 787 and 737 fleet.

On Monday, the Civil Aviation Ministry told Parliament that investigations into all possible causes of last year's crash are ongoing. The Aircraft Accident Investigation Bureau said the final report will be released after thorough technical analysis. Safety experts noted that precautionary groundings are standard to prevent risks and protect passengers.

Airline officials stressed that safety remains the top priority, and any suspected technical fault, however minor, triggers immediate inspection and corrective action.



Foxconn faces tax and local employment row in Karnataka

BENGALURU

Foxconn Hon Hai Technology India Mega Development Pvt. Ltd is in dispute with the Bengaluru Rural Gram Panchayat over alleged tax evasion, violations of building regulations, and failure to employ local residents. The Panchayat has issued a notice demanding details of approved building plans, construction licences, completion and occupancy certificates, and survey-wise built-up area information for facilities in Doddagollahalli and Aruvanahalli villages, covering 5.33 lakh square metres. Officials noted that while large-scale construction appears complete and operations have reportedly started, official records still list the land as vacant. The Panchayat warned that legal action under the Karnataka Gram Swaraj and Panchayat Raj Act would follow if Foxconn does not comply within seven days.

MAMATA SLAMS CEC OVER BENGAL VOTER ROLL ROW

NEW DELHI

West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee on Monday strongly criticized Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar after a meeting in the national capital, accusing the Election Commission of unfairly targeting her state during a Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of voter lists.

Banerjee, who met the CEC along with Trinamool Congress leaders and families she described as affected by the revision process, said she had "never seen such an arrogant Election Commissioner." She alleged that nearly 58 lakh names were removed from electoral rolls in West Bengal without giving people a fair chance to respond.

"I respect the constitutional post, but no one should misuse power," Banerjee told reporters after the meeting. She questioned why Bengal was being singled out and said elections should be a celebration of democracy, not a reason for fear among voters.

The Chief Minister also raised concerns about heavy police presence outside Banga Bhawan in Delhi, where members of her party and visiting citizens had gathered. She claimed some people from Bengal felt intimidated. However, Delhi Police said no officers entered the premises or stopped anyone from moving in or out.

Banerjee arrived in Delhi on Sunday and was accompanied by Trinamool MPs Abhishek Banerjee and Kalyan Banerjee. She had sought the meeting to discuss complaints related to the voter roll revision exercise in the state.

The Election Commission had earlier agreed to hear her concerns. There was no immediate detailed response from the Commission after the meeting.

The issue has now taken a political turn, with the Trinamool Congress accusing central authorities of bias, while officials maintain that electoral roll revisions follow established rules and procedures.

Government made Governor speak lies: Has CM Siddaramaiah become a mouse, asks Ashoka

BENGALURU

Governor's Speech Under Fire
Participating in the thanksgiving resolution debate in the Assembly, Ashoka alleged that the Congress government had "made the Governor speak lies." He took a swipe at Chief Minister Siddaramaiah, saying the once-projected "tiger" of Karnataka politics had now become a "mouse," unable to take firm decisions or stand up for the state's interests. Ashoka also questioned the renaming of Ramanagara district and alleged the systematic removal of Mahatma Gandhi's name from official records and institutions.

Congress Resolutions and Amendments
Ashoka said the Congress government had passed 18 resolutions against the Centre, creating avoidable political confrontation instead of focusing on governance. He pointed out that the Congress had amended the Constitution 72 times, while Prime Minister Narendra Modi's government had done so only eight times.

Scheme Naming and Corruption Allegations
Raising concerns over government schemes, Ashoka claimed that out of 454 schemes, a large number were named after Indira Gandhi and Rajiv Gandhi, while Mahatma Gandhi's contribution was largely ignored.

Unfinished Projects and Mounting Debt
Ashoka alleged that funds allocated to the Kalyana Karnataka Board and the Grihalakshmi scheme had not reached beneficiaries. He claimed Siddaramaiah had pushed the state's debt to a record ₹7.64 lakh crore. Alleged irregularities in MUDA, excise, Dalit welfare funds, and road projects were cited as examples of misgovernance.

Law and Order and Social Concerns
Pointing to deteriorating law and order, Ashoka said rape cases had risen by 23%, POCSO cases by 5%, and cybercrime losses touched ₹5,473 crore. He also alleged police involvement in drug smuggling and criticised the denial of land to artist B. Jayashree, claiming locals were being sidelined.

HASINA DECLARED FUGITIVE

Hasina Sentenced To 10 Years in Jail Over Corruption Allegations

DHAKA

Sheikh Hasina, who has been living in exile in India since August 5, 2024, was designated a fugitive by the court after she failed to appear during the trial. The cases were brought by the Anti-Corruption Commission (ACC), which accused her and others of violating rules in allocating two plots under the Rajuk New Town Project in Purbachol without following proper procedures.

Several of Hasina's family members were also convicted. Her nephew Radwan Mujib Siddiq and niece Azmina Siddiq were each sentenced to seven years, while another niece, Tulip Rizwana Siddiq, received four years behind bars. A Rajuk official who had surrendered to the court, Mohammad Khurshid Alam, was given a two-year term.

In addition to prison sentences, all those convicted were fined Tk 1 lakh each, with the court ordering an extra six months' imprisonment if the fines are not paid. The judgment was announced around midday in Dhaka.

The corruption verdict comes amid ongoing political upheaval in Bangladesh following Hasina's fall from power after nationwide protests in mid-2024. In July 2025, she was separately indicted by Bangladesh's International Crimes Tribunal for alleged crimes against humanity linked to a brutal government crackdown during weeks of unrest the previous year. Hasina's supporters have called the legal actions politically motivated, while the government and prosecutors say the rulings show a commitment to enforcing anti-corruption laws and accountability.

The former prime minister remains in India.

By giving greater emphasis to the youth and the technology sector in the current year's budget, programmes aligned with the vision of a Developed India are being implemented, said Mysuru–Kodagu Lok Sabha Member of Parliament Yaduveer Krishnadatta Chamaraja Wadiyar.

In a press release issued on the Union Budget for the financial year 2026–27, the MP said that this is a development-oriented and people-centric budget. Projects such as the upcoming COSMOS Planetarium and Astronomy Training Centre in Mysuru, to be developed under the leadership of the Indian Institute of Astrophysics, will be of immense benefit. COSMOS will grow into a hub for education, training, research and public engagement. It will help inspire the next generation of scientists and strengthen the country's scientific capabilities on the path to Viksit Bharat 2047.

The MP said it is noteworthy that financial discipline, economic balance, and record public investment in infrastructure have been maintained, while plans are being expanded to Tier-2 and Tier-3 cities to accelerate semiconductor, biopharma and electronics manufacturing. The central government has laid emphasis on pathways from education to employment, AVGC (Animation, Visual Effects, Gaming and Comics), healthcare, tourism skills, and the development of regional growth centres.

MSMEs are the backbone of India's economy. Providing substantial allocations for credit, technology adoption, market linkages and ease-of-doing-business initiatives is a major achievement of the government.

He further stated that the budget proposes strengthening logistics by focusing on freight corridors, inland waterways and high-speed rail connectivity. This will improve regional connectivity and create sustainable economic opportunities, forming a strong foundation for building a resilient and future-ready nation. Overall, the current year's budget is a visionary one that empowers the youth and promotes social development and economic growth, he added.

Royal Voice Joins People's Cry: Pramodadevi Wadiyar Leads Save Chamundi Stir

SHYAM SUNDAR VATTAM
MYSURU

- "Chamundi Hill is our spiritual backbone. Once destroyed, it can never be restored," — Srinivasa Rao, a Senior citizen, Mysuru
- "Development without sensitivity is nothing but destruction," — Environmental activist
- "This is not politics, this is about our identity and heritage," — Youth participant
- "If we remain silent today, future generations will never forgive us," — Historian
- "We welcome facilities for devotees, but not at the cost of nature and history," — Temple devotee

On Sunday, Chamundi Hill turned into a living symbol of resistance, as people from all walks of life converged in large numbers responding to a clarion call by concerned citizens to protect the sacred hill from destruction in the name of the PRASAD project.

From the foothills to the summit, the air echoed with emotion, devotion, and determination, as Mysureans sent out a clear message — Chamundi Hill is not negotiable.

The agitation gathered unprecedented momentum and moral strength when Smt. Pramodadevi Wadiyar, wife of former MP late Srikantadatta Narasimha Raja Wadiyar and a respected member of the Mysuru royal family, joined the protest and extended her wholehearted support to the movement. Her presence gave the agitation what many described as "elephant power", symbolising heritage, dignity, and authority.

Walking shoulder to shoulder with citizens, Pramodadevi Wadiyar participated in the protest march led by Bhamy V. Shenoy, founder of Mysore Grahakara Parishad, Maj Gen (Retd) S.G. Vombatkere, noted historian Prof. Rangarajan, Melukote MLA Darshan Puttanaiah, and several environmentalists, historians, and activists.

Protesters, armed with placards, lined both sides of the iconic 1001 steps, silently but powerfully conveying the message that development must not come at the cost of heritage and ecology.

Addressing the gathering, Smt. Pramodadevi Wadiyar expressed deep concern over what she termed unscientific and insensitive works being carried out atop the historic hill. Clarifying her stand, she said that while her late husband was associated with the Congress and her son is a BJP MP, she herself does not belong to any political party. "This is not a political issue, it is an issue of faith, history, and responsibility," she asserted.

She outlined two clear paths before the people: first, to pressure the State Government to immediately halt the ongoing works in the larger interest of the temple and the hill; second, to approach the court against the PRASAD scheme, which she strongly felt is unsuitable for Chamundi Hill. In an emotional moment, she concluded by saying that she would ultimately pray to Goddess Chamundeshwari herself to protect her sacred abode from destruction.

Renowned historian Dharmendra, popularly known as 'Dharmu', warned that no further projects should ever be taken up on Chamundi Hill. He reminded the audience of the hill's rich historical legacy, nurtured and protected by the Mysore rulers for centuries. "Neither the State nor the Union Government has the moral right to tamper with this sacred hill," he said, urging citizens to remain vigilant.

Later, hundreds of protesters climbed the 1001 steps, chanting and carrying placards with the powerful message 'Save Chamundi'. Members of various organisations joined the campaign, sending a strong and unmistakable warning to the authorities that Mysureans will not tolerate the destruction of Chamundi Hill in the name of development.

Members of Team Mysuru took part in the march to Chamundi Hill, organised following a call given by Parisara Balaga (Environment Group) and various organisations of Mysuru. During the programme, a strong demand was made to stop all ongoing construction works on Chamundi Hill. It was urged that the funds allocated under the PRASAD project should instead be utilised for creating parking facilities for private vehicles at the foothills, procuring electric buses, and for solid waste and sewage management. Through these measures, the participants demanded that the religious sanctity, spiritual significance, and cultural heritage of Chamundi Hill be preserved and enhanced.

Historian Dharmendra Kumar, along with Team Mysuru members Gokul Govardhan, Yashwanth, Kiran Jairam Gowda, Anil Jain, Shivaprasad, Hiriyanna, Ramaprasad, Manohar, Trimurthy, Vasanth, Nagendra, Yateesh, Balakrishna, Harish Shetty, Sharath, Ramesh, Manju Hunasuru, Ganesh Prasad, Smt. Sahana, Shanthakumari, Kaveri, Kumari Sukrutha, Kalyani, Minugu, and others were present.

MCC Cracks the Whip on Stray Pigs, Cattle Roaming Roads

In a strong move aimed at ensuring public safety, smooth traffic flow and cleanliness, the Mysuru City Corporation (MCC) has issued a stern warning to livestock owners against allowing stray pigs and stray cattle/calves to roam freely on city roads and public places.

The MCC has noted with serious concern that the unchecked movement of stray pigs and cattle across busy roads and residential areas is causing frequent traffic disruptions and posing a grave threat to motorists and pedestrians. Several incidents of serious and fatal road accidents have reportedly occurred due to animals suddenly straying onto roads, endangering lives and property.

Apart from traffic hazards, stray pigs and cattle are also becoming a major public sanitation issue. In search of food, these animals rummage through garbage bins, scattering waste onto roads and footpaths, thereby contributing to environmental pollution, foul smell, and the spread of diseases. Residents across various localities have repeatedly complained about the worsening hygiene conditions caused by this menace.

The City Corporation stated that despite issuing multiple oral warnings in the past, many livestock owners have continued to let their animals loose in public spaces, showing blatant disregard for public safety and cleanliness norms. As a result, the civic body has now decided to adopt a zero-tolerance approach.

In the interest of public health, cleanliness and urban safety, the MCC has categorically warned livestock owners not to allow stray pigs or cattle/calves on Mysuru city roads or public areas. The Corporation has made it clear that if such animals are found roaming within the MCC limits, strict action will be taken as per rules without any prior notice.

Issuing this warning through a press release, the Mysuru City Corporation Commissioner appealed to livestock owners to act responsibly and cooperate with civic authorities in maintaining a safe, clean and orderly city.

NDPS Cases: Mysuru Court Hands Down Stringent Jail Terms to Ganja Offenders

MYSURU

The 7th Additional District and Sessions Court, Mysuru, has imposed stringent punishments in two separate ganja-related cases, reinforcing a tough stance against narcotics offences under the NDPS Act.

In the first case, the second accused Syed Babir Bin Syed Aman (38) of Belavatta village was found guilty of cultivating ganja plants at his residence, drying them in an isolated location and attempting to sell them. Police seized 3 kg 230 grams of ganja from his possession. The accused was caught red-handed on August 6, 2023, while transferring the ganja plants into plastic bags near the JSS College of Pharmacy compound, close to JC Convention Hall, within the limits of NR Police Station.

Following trial, Judge M. Ramesh convicted the accused on January 22, 2026, and sentenced him to three years of rigorous imprisonment and a fine of ₹30,000 each under Sections 20(a) and 20(b)(ii)(B) of the NDPS Act. In default of payment of fine, he will have to undergo an additional six months of rigorous imprisonment. The case was prosecuted by Government Prosecutor N.B. Vijayalakshmi.

In another case, the court awarded five years of rigorous imprisonment to accused Mudasir Ahmed @ Muddu and Mohammed Imran @ Baban @ Ameer for illegal possession and sale of ganja. On April 6, 2023, Udayagiri police arrested the accused while they were sharing 12 kg 600 grams of ganja with the intention of selling it to customers near Rajiv Nagar, within the jurisdiction of Udayagiri Police Station. The contraband was recovered from a Suzuki Burgman Street scooter (KA-55 EC-0479).

After examining the evidence, the court on January 30, 2026, convicted Accused Nos. 1 to 3 under Section 20(b) of the NDPS Act, sentencing them to five years of rigorous imprisonment and a fine of ₹50,000 each. In default of fine payment, they will have to undergo an additional one month of rigorous imprisonment.

Budget CER Plan Gives K'taka Tier-2 Cities a Way Beyond

K'taka must fix finances and governance before CER funds can transform cities

BENGALURU

The Union Budget's proposal for City Economic Regions (CERs) opens a significant opportunity for Karnataka's tier-2 and tier-3 cities to step out of Bengaluru's long shadow and stake a claim in organised urban growth. Designed to promote region-led development, the scheme promises ₹5,000 crore for each CER over five years, to be allocated through a challenge-based process that rewards credible plans for jobs, infrastructure and governance reforms.

Presenting the Budget, Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman underlined the importance of cities as engines of growth, innovation and employment. She said the focus would now extend beyond metros to tier-2 and tier-3 cities and even temple towns, which need modern infrastructure and reliable civic amenities to unlock their economic potential. The CER framework seeks to harness agglomeration benefits by mapping regions around specific growth drivers rather than isolated municipal projects.

For Karnataka, the proposal could help rebalance an urban map that has long been dominated by Bengaluru. However, success will depend on how carefully the state identifies its candidate regions. Mysuru could leverage its strengths in IT services, heritage tourism and food processing. Mangaluru offers the potential of a port-led economy anchored in petrochemicals, logistics and fisheries. Hubballi–Dharwad brings rail manufacturing, a growing services sector and a strong educational base. Each region will need to demonstrate how investments can generate jobs beyond city limits and integrate surrounding towns through efficient transport and logistics networks.

What Karnataka's cities currently lack is a single planning framework that links housing, transport and industry across district boundaries. The CER approach hints at moving away from funding standalone flyovers or industrial parks toward regional programmes with defined revenue streams and scope for private participation.

Financing, however, remains a major hurdle. The Budget's broader push for urban financing includes incentives for municipal bonds, offering a ₹100 crore incentive for a single bond issue exceeding ₹1,000 crore. Most cities in Karnataka have limited experience with such instruments and will need to first strengthen accounting systems, improve credit ratings and expand land-based revenues before bond issues become viable.

The CER proposal offers Karnataka a structured pathway to diversify growth beyond Bengaluru. Swift selection of pilot regions, credible project pipelines and political will to reform city governance will determine whether the state can seize this opportunity—or watch the ₹5,000-crore promise flow to better-prepared competitors.

Uma Reddy Hails Budget, Sees Strong Boost for Growth

BENGALURU

FKCCI also welcomed the Bharat Vistar initiative, aimed at strengthening traditional and agro-based industries such as areca nut, coconut and sandalwood through improved market access and value addition.

The Karnataka Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FKCCI) has welcomed the Union Budget 2026–27, stating that it provides a clear roadmap for sustained economic growth while maintaining fiscal discipline. FKCCI President Uma Reddy said the Budget addresses several long-standing concerns of industry and offers renewed momentum to manufacturing, MSMEs, infrastructure and ease of doing business.

Addressing the media, Uma Reddy said the Budget reflects a balanced approach that combines growth-oriented reforms with prudent fiscal management. "The Union Budget 2026–27 will strengthen India's growth momentum while keeping fiscal discipline in mind. Its emphasis on manufacturing, IT, MSMEs, infrastructure and simplified compliance aligns closely with industry priorities and job creation," she said.

She noted that the government's push towards trust-based governance, simplified regulatory frameworks and continued public capital expenditure would help create a predictable and stable policy environment. "Such clarity is critical for businesses to plan long-term investments and expand operations," Uma Reddy added. Highlighting measures for MSMEs, she said several proposals directly address challenges related to liquidity, competitiveness and formalisation. These include the ₹10,000 crore SME Growth Fund, mandatory use of the Trade Receivables Discounting System (TReDS) by central public sector enterprises, revival of heritage industrial clusters and targeted tax and customs reforms. "These steps will significantly improve access to finance and strengthen the manufacturing ecosystem, while also boosting export competitiveness," she said.

Uma Reddy also welcomed the Budget's focus on electronics and semiconductor manufacturing, noting that it would create opportunities for ancillary and complementary industries. Improved access to finance and streamlined compliance mechanisms, she said, would help small businesses scale up and integrate better with global supply chains.

The Budget holds particular significance for Karnataka, given the state's strong base of MSMEs, start-ups, IT and digital services firms, and export-oriented manufacturing units. "The focus on MSME credit flow, logistics infrastructure, electronics manufacturing and development of Tier-II and Tier-III cities is encouraging for Karnataka," she said. She added that initiatives such as expanded TReDS coverage, professional compliance support for MSMEs and revival of industrial clusters would benefit Karnataka's industrial corridors and growth hubs. On infrastructure, Uma Reddy said proposals for high-speed rail corridors connecting Bengaluru with major economic centres would enhance productivity, logistics efficiency and regional growth.

Overall, she said the Budget strikes a fine balance between growth, reforms and inclusion, providing a strong foundation for India's journey towards becoming a developed economy.

CJ Roy's Death: SIT Records Statements of I-T Officials

BENGALURU

The Special Investigation Team (SIT) probing the death of Confident Group chairman CJ Roy has recorded the statements of income tax officials who were present at his Langford Town office on January 30, when he allegedly shot himself with his licensed pistol.

According to investigators, all Income Tax (I-T) personnel present at the office that day have been examined. The officials told the SIT that they had not questioned Roy and were at the premises only to carry out final scrutiny of documents seized during earlier searches. They said their visit was limited to verification of records and obtaining Roy's signature, along with signatures from some staff members. An officer said the I-T team maintained that their role did not go beyond routine verification and that they were unaware Roy was carrying a firearm. "They did not seize his mobile phone or briefcase and did not restrict his movement in any way," the officer said, adding that the officials claimed they did not interfere with Roy's regular office activities. Police, however, are approaching claims that the I-T officials did not interact with Roy with caution. "We cannot conclusively say there was no conversation at all. What is clear at this stage is that the officials did not prevent him from carrying out routine activities," an investigator said.

The SIT described the probe as being at an early stage. Crime scene reconstruction is yet to be conducted and will be carried out in the presence of the complainant, TA Joseph, founding director and managing director of Confident Group. Statements of a few employees have already been recorded, officials said.

Summons have been issued to Joseph, Roy's brother CJ Babu and other associates for questioning. Police had planned to record their statements on Sunday, but postponed the exercise after the family delayed taking custody of the body following the post-mortem on Saturday.

Investigators said they have several doubts regarding Joseph's complaint, particularly about the sequence of events on the day of the incident. Questions remain about when Roy reached the office, the nature of his interactions with the I-T officials, the time two men allegedly entered his chamber, and when Joseph was asked to step out.

YOUTH AGAINST DRUGS

Say no to drugs, choose bright future

GADAG

Youth is the time of dreams, efforts, and building a bright future. But today, some young people are straying from the right path and falling into the trap of drug addiction.

Drugs may seem attractive at first, but they destroy the mind, erode values, and ruin lives. Even a moment of curiosity can lead to lifelong damage, and a small taste can wipe out happiness. This stark reality was shown through the powerful paintings of Dr. Nanda Hanabaratti, Deputy Director of the Social Welfare Department. His artworks depict the dark grip of drugs using symbols like syringes, pills, and shadowy hands, sending a strong message: "Say No To Drugs."

Dr. Hanabaratti's paintings are more than art; they are a warning. Addiction does not just harm the individual but also shatters family dreams and weakens society. Youth are the strength of the nation. If they fall into drugs, the country's future fades. But awareness and discipline can guide them toward success.

Parents are urged to lead with love, teachers to guide with discipline, and society to cooperate in building strong, value-based youth. Together, it is possible to fight the drug menace. Deputy Commissioner C.N. Sridhar said awareness campaigns are being carried out in collaboration with the district administration, Zilla Panchayat, District Legal Services Authority, and police. "Success is possible only with public support," he added. District Superintendent of Police Rohan Jagadish emphasized that along with legal action, family care and community support are crucial to saving the youth.

Through awareness, guidance, and community effort, the youth can resist drugs, preserve their values, and build a brighter future.

Jaishankar to Attend US Critical Minerals Ministerial Talks Week

EAM S Jaishankar will visit the United States for key talks on minerals

NEW DELHI

According to the Ministry of External Affairs, the visit will take place from February two to four. Jaishankar will attend the Critical Minerals Ministerial called by US Secretary of State Marco Rubio. The meeting will focus on strong supply chains, clean energy change, and cooperation on key minerals. During the visit, the minister will also meet senior members of the United States administration.

The United States said the first ministerial will bring partners from around the world together. The aim is to build safe and steady mineral supply chains needed for growth and security. Officials said these minerals support national safety, new technology, and the move to clean energy.

Similar talks were held earlier when the US Treasury hosted a finance meeting in Washington. Finance ministers from many countries discussed ways to widen and protect mineral supply networks. India was represented there by Union Minister Ashwini Vaishnaw, who handles railways and technology.

India and the United States are also in touch on defence cooperation and military industry ties. A US Congressional team led by Mike Rogers met Defence Secretary Rajesh Kumar Singh. The talks covered stronger defence industry links and recent long term partnership agreements. Officials said such meetings show growing trust and wider cooperation between the two democratic nations. The mineral talks are expected to support India's clean energy plans and future industries. Experts believe closer work with partners will reduce risks, cut delays, and improve global supplies.

Overall, the visit highlights shared goals, steady dialogue, and practical steps as India and the United States work together on minerals, defence links, energy security, and long term cooperation across government, industry, and people, while building trust for future economic and strategic stability for both nations.

Centre Raises K'taka Tax Share, Joshi Says

NEW DELHI

Union minister says revised tax sharing gives Karnataka more funds, rejecting Congress charges of neglect in the latest Union Budget

The Central government has increased Karnataka's share in central taxes, Union Minister Pralhad Joshi said on Monday, rejecting claims by the state Congress leadership. Speaking in New Delhi, Joshi said Karnataka's share has risen from 3.647 per cent to 4.131 per cent under the revised tax distribution formula. He said this change would bring the state several thousand crore rupees in additional revenue during the coming financial year.

According to the Union Budget for 2026–27, Karnataka has been allocated Rs 63,049 crore as its share of central taxes. Joshi said this amount is higher than what the state received in the previous year. He stressed that the Centre has not discriminated against Karnataka and that the revised share reflects recommendations of the 16th Finance Commission.

The minister explained that the overall tax devolution to states remains unchanged at 41 per cent. However, individual state shares have been adjusted based on updated criteria, which resulted in Karnataka receiving a higher proportion. He said allegations of injustice were politically motivated and ignored official figures.

Joshi welcomed the 2026–27 Union Budget, saying it aligns with Prime Minister Narendra Modi's Viksit Bharat vision and promotes growth across seven sectors. He said the Rs 10,000 crore allocation for biopharma would strengthen healthcare innovation. In contrast, Chief Minister Siddaramaiah termed the budget disappointing, citing reduced funds for central schemes and limited gains from rail projects. Deputy Chief Minister D K Shivakumar also said Karnataka received no real benefits, underlining Centre–state differences on funding and development priorities.

AIMJ Chief Condemns Attacks On Kashmiri Shawl Sellers

BAREILLY

All India Muslim Jamaat (AIMJ) National President Maulana Shahabuddin Razvi on Monday condemned recent attacks on Kashmiri shawl sellers in Uttarakhand and Himachal Pradesh, accusing state governments of failing to protect migrant traders.

His remarks came after two Kashmiri brothers were assaulted in Dehradun, while another trader, Mohd Ramzan, was allegedly harassed in Kangra district. Razvi said such incidents reflect rising intolerance and administrative negligence.

Referring to an attack on a shopkeeper in Haridwar, he alleged that antisocial elements attempted to drive him away, creating communal divisions. He also criticised the Congress-led Himachal Pradesh government over law and order and said madrasas in Uttar Pradesh would cooperate with official inspections.

The Pennaiyar river dispute highlights interstate tensions, legal processes, and efforts to ensure fairness and cooperation

SC Orders Tribunal For Pennaiyar River Water Dispute

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court has stepped in to resolve a long-running water sharing dispute between two southern states. On Monday, the apex court directed the Union government to set up an inter-State river water disputes tribunal within one month. The bench of Justices Vikram Nath and N V Anjaria ordered the Centre to issue a notification in the Official Gazette and refer Tamil Nadu's complaint to the tribunal under the Inter-State River Water Disputes Act, 1956.

The dispute relates to sharing of waters of the Pennaiyar river system, also known as Dakshina Pinakini, between Tamil Nadu and Karnataka. The court said there was no reason to delay the formation of a tribunal to decide the issue.

Tamil Nadu had approached the Supreme Court alleging that projects planned and carried out by Karnataka in the upper reaches of the river would harm its downstream interests.

These include works on the Markandeya Nadhi and pumping of water from tanks and directly from the river.

The state said such actions could affect farmers, drinking water supply, and livelihoods in several districts. It also claimed that repeated talks and meetings between the two states had failed to settle the dispute.

Tamil Nadu urged the court to restrain Karnataka from constructing a dam near Yargol and launching new Pennaiyar basin projects until resolution.

The Centre earlier advised dialogue, but law mandates tribunal jurisdiction. This directive aims to ensure clarity, fairness, and timely settlement of the long-pending water-sharing conflict, safeguarding farming and urban communities in both states.

SC Grants Bail In Pune Porsche Blood Tampering Case

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Monday granted bail to three people accused of tampering with blood samples in the high-profile Pune Porsche hit-and-run case.

A bench of Justices B.V. Nagarathna and Ujjal Bhuyan ordered the release of Ashish Satish Mittal, Aditya Avinash Sood, and Amar Santhosh Gaikwad. The bench noted that the accused had been in jail for nearly twenty months and directed that their release follow conditions set by the trial court.

The three are alleged to have swapped blood samples of two minor passengers in the Porsche, who were reportedly under the influence of alcohol at the time of the accident. They face charges including forgery, evidence tampering, and bribery under the Indian Penal Code and the Prevention of Corruption Act.

The crash, which occurred on May 19, 2024, killed two IT professionals, Anis Awadhiya and Ashwini Koshta, in Pune's Kalyaninagar area.

The car was allegedly driven by a seventeen-year-old under the influence of alcohol. Mittal is a friend of one minor's father, Sood is the father of the other minor, and Gaikwad allegedly received Rs 3 lakh to facilitate the blood sample swap.

While granting bail, the court highlighted parental responsibility, noting that handing vehicles to minors and enabling reckless behaviour reflects a broader social problem.

Teacher Aspirants Protest In Lucknow Ahead Supreme Court Hearing

LUCKNOW

Candidates linked to the long pending 69,000 teacher recruitment case staged a protest in Lucknow on Monday seeking early justice.

The protest was held outside the residence of Uttar Pradesh Deputy Chief Minister Keshav Prasad Maurya ahead of the upcoming Supreme Court hearing. Aspirants alleged serious irregularities in the recruitment process and long delays in issuing appointment letters even after they cleared the examination. Raising slogans and holding placards, protesters appealed to Maurya and Minister of State for Basic Education Sandeep Singh to intervene. They pointed out that Maurya belongs to the OBC community and urged him to support candidates from backward sections waiting for employment.

Several aspirants said they have waited for years despite meeting all eligibility conditions. They said the uncertainty has damaged their careers and affected family responsibilities. One candidate said clearing the exam brought hope, but the delay has left many jobless and stressed.

Another protester, Manoj Yadav, said repeated hearing dates have passed without progress. He claimed that nearly twenty eight dates have gone by and the government has failed to present its case properly. He added that the absence of strong representation has deepened their disappointment.

The protesters urged the state government to act responsibly and ensure deserving candidates are not denied jobs. They said repeated promises from authorities have not resulted in any real solution.

Heavy police presence was seen during the protest to maintain order. Some protesters were briefly detained as a precaution, though the demonstration remained peaceful. The recruitment issue has seen multiple legal challenges over evaluation and reservation rules.

Indore Must Speak Louder Over Contaminated Water Deaths Issue

INDORE

Congress leader Jitu Patwari on Monday urged Indore residents to raise their voice over contaminated water deaths and demand accountability. He said people should stand in solidarity with families of victims from Bhagirathpura and question civic authorities and elected representatives.

In a video message, the Madhya Pradesh Congress president claimed that thirty two people have died due to contaminated water in Bhagirathpura. He said another patient, Anil Kushwaha, died on Monday morning at a private hospital, taking the toll to thirty two. Patwari alleged that the Indore Municipal Corporation and district administration failed to ensure safe drinking water in several localities. Calling the situation alarming, Patwari said silence from the city was troubling despite the deaths. He said the Congress, as the opposition, has consistently raised the issue and appealed to citizens to speak out for their right to clean water.

Patwari announced that the Congress will hold a peaceful protest with public participation near Rajwada palace. He said the protest aims to highlight the BJP government's failure to fix responsibility for the tragedy.

The state government and district administration, which are monitoring affected patients, have not issued a fresh official statement on the latest death. The matter is currently before the Indore bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court.

During a hearing on January twenty seven, the court appointed former judge Justice Sushil Kumar Gupta as a one member inquiry commission. The court observed that the incident raised serious concerns related to the constitutional right to life. It also noted disputes over actual implementation of safety measures. State responded.

Delhi HC Orders Survey Of Buildings Near Heritage Sites

NEW DELHI

The Delhi High Court on Monday directed a thorough survey of all buildings near the city's notified heritage sites to ensure compliance with sanctioned plans and norms. A Division Bench of Justices Devendra Kumar Upadhyaya and Tejas Karia set a three-month deadline for the exercise.

The court was hearing a batch of writ petitions highlighting violations near heritage structures. Petitioners argued that constructions close to heritage buildings often alter their visual and structural character, causing defacement. They also claimed that the Municipal Corporation of Delhi frequently approves building plans without following bye-laws or the Heritage Conservation Committee's recommendations.

The Bench ordered the municipal body to carry out a physical survey of all buildings in the vicinity of heritage properties. Each survey team must include one officer nominated by the Heritage Conservation Committee to ensure proper oversight. Separate reports for each heritage property must be prepared and submitted to the court. Copies of the reports must also be shared with the petitioners' counsel, who can respond before the next hearing.

The court clarified that "heritage buildings/structures/properties" in its order refers only to properties officially listed in heritage notifications.

BOTTLE BUYBACK

Tasmac Revives Empty Bottle Buy Back Scheme

CHENNAI

After being temporarily put on hold amid protests by shop workers, the Tamil Nadu State Marketing Corporation, or Tasmac, will restart its empty liquor bottle buy back scheme in Chennai later this week.

Officials said the decision follows a review of earlier problems and is aimed at making the process smoother this time.

The scheme was earlier stopped after Tasmac workers closed liquor shops and protested at depots, saying they lacked facilities and faced extra work.

The Madras High Court has asked Tasmac to submit a status report by the end of February, even as plans move ahead.

A senior official said the earlier attempt failed because the scheme was launched across the city at once, causing confusion.

This time, it will be introduced in phases and will cover all city zones within a week.

Under the scheme, buyers pay ten rupees extra for each bottle and get the money back when they return the empty bottle.

The plan is already working in other parts of Tamil Nadu and was first started in hill areas to protect wildlife from glass waste.

Workers continue to oppose it, saying staff strength and storage space are not enough, and want a separate agency to handle bottles.

Union leader Dhanasekaran said their demands remain unchanged and warned that the workload will rise without proper support.

Tasmac officials said the phased return may reduce problems, but the balance between green goals and worker concerns will be closely watched.

The coming days will show whether the scheme can run smoothly in Chennai without fresh protests or further legal hurdles from workers and public across the city.

India To Join 2026 Commonwealth Law Ministers Meeting

The meeting, chaired by Fiji's Siromi Turaga, will address law, climate, digital change, and include diverse youth and advocacy perspectives

NEW DELHI

India will participate in the 2026 Commonwealth Law Ministers Meeting in Nadi, Fiji, from February 9 to 12, officials said. The three-day meeting brings together ministers and attorneys general from across the Commonwealth to discuss strengthening legal systems and promoting the rule of law globally.

The ministers are expected to adopt practical measures to strengthen legal institutions and uphold justice. Commonwealth Secretary-General Shirley Botchwey thanked Fiji for hosting the event, emphasizing that the rule of law is essential for peace, stability, and development. "Where it is weakened, ordinary people feel the impact most sharply. We must work together to uphold it as a protection for all," she said.

The meeting will be chaired by Siromi Turaga, Fiji's Minister for Justice and acting Attorney General, under the theme "Anchoring Justice in a Changing Tide: Strengthening the Rule of Law for a Resilient Future." Turaga highlighted challenges such as climate change, digital transformation, and regional cooperation, noting the need for flexible, inclusive, and resilient legal systems.

Alongside ministerial discussions, five side events will include youth leaders, justice system beneficiaries, and disability rights advocates, ensuring diverse perspectives are considered. Outcomes of the meeting are expected to inform the agenda of the upcoming Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting (CHOGM) in Antigua and Barbuda later this year.

Officials said India's participation underscores its commitment to the rule of law, justice, and international cooperation, while also contributing to discussions on resilient legal systems for a rapidly changing world.

CBI Launches Operation CyStrike Against Fraud

NEW DELHI

The Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) launched Operation CyStrike on January 30 in collaboration with law enforcement agencies from the USA, UK, Kuwait, Ireland, and Singapore. The operation aimed to dismantle transnational cyber-enabled financial crime networks operating from India and abroad.

As part of the crackdown, the CBI conducted searches at 35 locations across New Delhi, Bihar, Maharashtra, Karnataka, Punjab, Rajasthan, Uttar Pradesh, Uttarakhand, Telangana, and West Bengal. The raids led to the exposure and disruption of cyber-crime networks that defrauded victims in the USA, UK, Kuwait, Ireland, Singapore, and India by using fake online identities. Investigators seized laptops, mobile phones, hard disks, and other electronic devices containing crucial digital evidence. During the operations, key operative Pfokrehrii Peter was arrested.

Another fraudulent network operating from New Delhi, Ghaziabad, and Karnataka was busted under the domain https://eservicemoi-Kw.com. This group falsely offered Kuwaiti e-visas and job appointments to Indian nationals in exchange for money. Investigators recovered cash totaling Rs 60 lakh along with devices containing fake documents.

The operation also uncovered and disabled multiple mule accounts used to transfer the proceeds of crime from foreign victims to the accused. Networks defrauding individuals in the UK, Ireland, and Singapore were dismantled, delivering a major blow to international cyber-fraud activities.

Led by the CBI with support from INTERPOL and other global agencies, Operation CyStrike underscores India's determination to combat organized, technology-enabled crime. Officials said the initiative not only disrupted major cyber-fraud networks but also reinforced measures to hold perpetrators accountable, sending a strong message about India's commitment to fighting transnational financial crimes.

PV Anvar Confirmed As UDF Beypore Candidate

KOZHIKODE

The United Democratic Front (UDF) will field Trinamool Congress leader P V Anvar as its candidate from the Beypore constituency in Kozhikode, KPCC president Sunny Joseph confirmed on Monday. Anvar, a former LDF MLA, resigned from the Assembly after leaving the Left Front and later joined the Trinamool Congress, now an associate party of the UDF. Anvar has been active in Beypore in recent weeks amid speculation that he would contest against Tourism Minister P A Mohamed Riyas, son-in-law of Chief Minister Pinarayi Vijayan, in the upcoming Assembly polls. Joseph said, "He will come out victorious and become the Beypore MLA," confirming Anvar's nomination.

On Monday, Anvar visited Chaliyam harbour and interacted with local fishermen and traders. Asked about his candidature, he did not give a definite answer, saying, "Someone will have to contest. It will be decided later. Let us see."

Anvar criticised Riyas for failing to address local issues, adding, "He is in the kick of being the son-in-law. I have no personal issue with him; my issue is with his actions." He further alleged that the CPI(M) and the government were dominated by a family, leaving local party workers sidelined.

He also questioned the LDF's statewide development rally, claiming, "If development has really happened, then why such a rally? It is a fraud." The CPI(M) and LDF have not responded to Anvar's remarks.

Earlier, Anvar had represented the Nilambur constituency in Malappuram district. He is now shifting focus to Beypore, while the UDF is expected to finalise candidates and seat-sharing arrangements in the coming weeks.

A day earlier, Saini welcomed the Union Budget 2026-27, calling it people-focused and aligned with Modi's vision for a developed India by 2047. Speaking in Panchkula, he described the budget as "visionary and historic," highlighting its dedication to uplifting the poorest and fostering inclusive growth. He said the budget's three main pillars are speed, capacity, and inclusive development.

The Finance Minister, Nirmala Sitharaman, presented the ninth consecutive Union Budget in Lok Sabha on Sunday. Key highlights include an increase in public capital expenditure to ₹12.2 lakh crore, seven high-speed rail corridors, new freight corridors, and operationalisation of 20 national waterways to support sustainable transport.

Calcutta HC Directs Police To Ensure Opposition Leaders' Security

KOLKATA

The Calcutta High Court on Monday directed West Bengal Police and Kolkata Police to provide full security for public political events of opposition leaders, including BJP legislators and Union ministers.

A division bench of Chief Justice Sujoy Paul and Justice Partha Sarathi Sen issued the order after hearing a petition from Leader of Opposition in the West Bengal Assembly, Suvendu Adhikari. He sought court intervention to ensure that opposition political programmes are not disrupted by alleged hostility from ruling Trinamool Congress (TMC) activists. The court instructed the police to strictly follow the directive until February 18, the next hearing date. Adhikari alleged that BJP leaders' public programmes often face violence, attacks, and resistance despite giving prior notice to authorities. He added that these incidents show police and administrative failure in maintaining law and order since the 2021 Assembly elections.

Adhikari's own convoy has reportedly faced multiple attacks since 2021, prompting the Union Home Ministry to upgrade his security. Last year, BJP MP Khagen Murmu and West Bengal Assembly BJP chief whip Sankar Ghosh were also attacked during public programmes and required hospitalisation due to injuries. The division bench's order emphasises the responsibility of the state and city police to ensure safe conduct of political events for opposition leaders and prevent harassment or violence, maintaining democratic norms in public political activities.

Cong Attacks KTR Over KCR SIT Interrogation

HYDERABAD

Congress leader Mota Rohit questioned BRS Working President KT Rama Rao (KTR) over Telangana Jagruthi President Kavitha's claims that her husband's phone was allegedly tapped during the BRS tenure. The comments follow KTR's political defense of the Special Investigation Team (SIT) questioning of BRS Chief K. Chandrashekar Rao (KCR) in the phone-tapping case.

Kavitha expressed confidence in the inquiry, urging patience for the probe results. "KCR garu was summoned and answered to the best of his knowledge. Let us see the outcome," she said.

KTR, however, launched a strong attack on the Congress-led state government, describing its two-year tenure in three words: Diversion, Subversion, Perversion. He accused the administration of spreading rumours, selective leaks, and diverting public attention from governance failures. He claimed the SIT had not strictly followed legal procedures but praised KCR for voluntarily cooperating with the probe, despite no legal obligation to appear in person.

According to KTR, the inquiry confirmed that no wrongdoing occurred during the BRS government. He urged the media not to rely on unofficial leaks, warning that attempts to malign KCR would "fall back on those who attempt it."

Russian Drone Strike on Miners' Bus Kills at Least 12 in Ukraine

Moscow

At least 12 people were killed on Sunday when a Russian drone struck a bus transporting miners in Ukraine's southeastern Dnipropetrovsk region, marking one of the deadliest recent attacks on civilian workers linked to the country's energy sector. Ukrainian officials said the bus was targeted in what they described as a deliberate strike on non-combatants. Ukraine's energy minister, Denys Shmyhal, condemned the attack in a statement posted on Telegram. Today, the enemy carried out a cynical and targeted attack on energy sector workers in the Dnipro region, he said, using language that underscored Kyiv's view that the strike was intentional and aimed at undermining critical infrastructure and morale. Local authorities said the bus was carrying miners to or from their workplace when it was hit by the drone.

Peter Mandelson Quits Labour Party Amid Scrutiny Over Epstein

New York

Peter Mandelson, the United Kingdom's former ambassador to the United States, has resigned from Prime Minister Keir Starmer's Labour Party following renewed media scrutiny over his past links to the late sex offender Jeffrey Epstein, according to reports published by British media on Sunday. Mandelson, a veteran political figure and senior member of the Labour Party, was removed from his role as Britain's top representative in Washington last year after emails emerged detailing his associations with Epstein. The correspondence reignited controversy surrounding Mandelson, who has previously acknowledged knowing Epstein but denied any involvement in or knowledge of his criminal activities. According to the reports, Mandelson said he had taken the decision to resign from the party in order to avoid causing further embarrassment to the Labour government.

Israel Reopens Rafah Crossing, Allowing Palestinian Movement

Israel reopened Gaza's Rafah crossing with Egypt, allowing limited pedestrian movement after months of closure amid ceasefire efforts.

GAZA

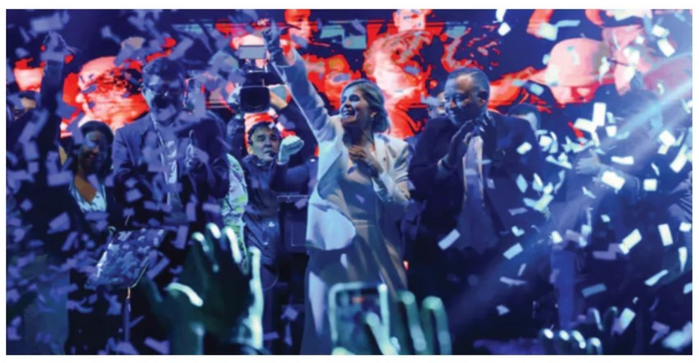
Israel on Monday reopened the border between Gaza and Egypt, marking a significant but tightly controlled step in easing restrictions on movement after months of intense conflict. The decision allows Palestinians to cross the border on foot, enabling some residents to leave the enclave while also permitting the return of those who had fled during the height of the war.

The reopening of the Rafah border crossing comes with strict limitations. Israeli authorities have insisted on comprehensive security checks for anyone entering or exiting Gaza, reflecting ongoing concerns over militant activity and the fragile nature of the ceasefire. Officials from both Israel and Egypt are also expected to enforce caps on the number of travelers allowed to cross each day, underscoring that the move is a controlled humanitarian measure rather than a full restoration of border operations.

Israel had seized control of the crossing in May 2024, roughly nine months into the devastating Gaza war. That conflict caused widespread destruction, displaced large segments of the population, and sharply curtailed access to humanitarian aid and civilian travel. The fighting was brought to a tenuous halt by an October ceasefire brokered by U.S. President Donald Trump, whose mediation efforts aimed to freeze hostilities and lay the groundwork for broader de-escalation.

Reopening Rafah was identified as a key requirement under the first phase of Trump's broader plan to halt fighting between Israel and Hamas militants. The crossing has long been Gaza's primary gateway to the outside world that does not pass directly through Israeli territory, giving it immense strategic and humanitarian importance.

An Israeli security official confirmed that European monitoring teams had arrived at the crossing to oversee operations and ensure compliance with agreed procedures. According to the official, the crossing has now opened to the movement of residents, for both entry and exit, signaling cautious progress while emphasizing vigilance.



Laura Fernandez Wins Costa Rica Election

Right-wing populist Laura Fernandez secured a decisive election victory in Costa Rica, promising irreversible change and a new political era.

SAN JOSE

Right-wing populist Laura Fernandez achieved a commanding victory in Costa Rica's general elections on Sunday, reshaping the political landscape of the Central American nation. With 88.43% of ballots counted, Fernandez had secured nearly half of the total votes cast, enough to win outright and avoid a second-round runoff scheduled for April 5. Her party is also projected to gain a majority in Congress, strengthening her mandate and positioning her to implement an ambitious agenda with fewer legislative obstacles.

Fernandez, who had consistently led opinion polls in the weeks ahead of the vote, needed at least 40% of the vote to clinch a first-round victory. As results confirmed her success, she delivered a fiery victory speech declaring a profound transformation for the country. Change will be deep and irreversible, she told cheering supporters, adding that Costa Rica was entering a new political era. According to Fernandez, the nation's second republic — established after the 1948 civil war — is a thing of the past.

Speaking to a sea of flag-waving supporters in San Jose, Fernandez called on citizens to participate in what she described as a historic moment. It's up to us to build the third republic, she said, framing her presidency as a break from decades of centrist and traditional party rule in Costa Rica. Her rhetoric resonated strongly with voters seeking tougher stances on governance, security, and economic reform.

Celebrations erupted at the Hispanidad Fountain, a popular gathering point for national sporting and political events. Supporters arrived by car and on foot, waving Costa Rican flags and holding stuffed jaguars — a symbol adopted by Fernandez's party to represent strength, renewal, and national pride. The festive atmosphere reflected the scale of her victory and the enthusiasm among her base.

Fernandez's closest rival, Alvaro Ramos, a centrist economist, secured roughly one-third of the vote. While Ramos mounted a competitive campaign, he was unable to overcome Fernandez's momentum and populist appeal. Claudia Dobles, a progressive architect and former first lady, finished a distant third with just under 5% of the vote, underscoring the electorate's shift away from traditional progressive platforms.

With a strong presidential win and a supportive Congress, Fernandez now faces heightened expectations. Supporters see an opportunity for decisive governance, while critics warn that her talk of ending the second republic could test Costa Rica's long-standing democratic institutions.

Germany Reaffirms Alignment With U.S. Over China Despite Strains

FRANKFURT

Germany will not pursue an equal-distance approach between the United States and China and will remain closer to Washington despite recent tensions, Foreign Minister Johann Wadephul said Monday. Speaking in Singapore, he stressed that Berlin's strategic and security priorities remain firmly anchored in the transatlantic partnership.

At a lecture hosted by the International Institute for Strategic Studies, Wadephul said the United States remains the most important partner for both Germany and Europe. Despite disagreements and policy differences, he noted, Europe continues to depend heavily on Washington for its security architecture.

Germany is not equidistant, Wadephul said, emphasizing that Berlin's relationship with the United States differs fundamentally from its ties with China. While acknowledging that some issues are currently alienating Washington from parts of the region, he argued that such frictions do not change the strategic reality of Europe's reliance on U.S. military and security support.

The remarks come amid wider European debates on balancing ties with major powers. While China is a crucial trading partner for Germany, Wadephul stressed that economic engagement must not be confused with security alignment, reaffirming the transatlantic bond as Europe's defense cornerstone in practice today.

Iran warned of a wider regional conflict if attacked by the United States, sharply escalating tensions with Washington.

Iran Warns of Regional War if Attacked by United States

TEHRAN

Iran's leadership on Sunday issued a stark warning that any military strike by the United States could ignite a broader regional conflict, further inflaming already heightened tensions between Iran and the United States. In a retaliatory political move, Tehran also designated European Union armies as terrorist groups, underscoring the depth of its confrontation with Western powers.

The warning comes as Washington has significantly increased its naval presence in the Middle East. U.S. President Donald Trump has repeatedly threatened intervention against Iran, saying action could follow if Tehran fails to agree to a nuclear deal or does not halt the killing of protesters. These statements have sharpened anxieties across the region, where rival powers and key shipping routes make any escalation particularly sensitive.

Despite the sharp rhetoric, both sides have signalled that the door to diplomacy remains open. Officials in Tehran and Washington have indicated a willingness to resume talks, even as pressure tactics continue. Regional actors have also stepped in to reduce tensions, with Turkey among those urging de-escalation and dialogue to prevent a spiral into open conflict.

Confusion briefly intensified on Sunday after Iran's state-run Press TV reported that the naval forces of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps would conduct live-fire exercises in the strategically vital Strait of Hormuz. The narrow strait is one of the world's most important oil transit routes, and any military activity there tends to alarm global markets. However, an Iranian official later denied the report, telling Reuters that there were no such plans and that the media accounts were incorrect.

Adding to the defiant tone, Iran's Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei dismissed U.S. military posturing in remarks carried by state media. Referring to Trump's statements about deploying ships to the region, Khamenei said the Iranian nation would not be intimidated. The Iranian nation shall not be scared by these things, he was quoted as saying, adding that the people would not be stirred by threats.

Shifting Loyalties Challenge Thaksin's Stronghold as Thai Voters

THAILAND

In a small gathering with friends, rubber farmer Pinittaya Boonlieng discussed how to cast his vote in the February 8 general election, reflecting a growing uncertainty among voters in one of Thailand's most politically significant regions. The conversation took place in northeastern Thailand, long regarded as a reliable stronghold for allies of former prime minister Thaksin Shinawatra, whose populist appeal once made electoral choices in the area almost automatic.

For decades, Thaksin's Pheu Thai Party has dominated agrarian provinces such as Ubon Ratchathani and its neighbors. Policies aimed at rural development, farmer debt relief, and social welfare cemented deep loyalty among working-class and farming communities. In election after election, northeastern voters delivered decisive victories to Thaksin-aligned parties, making the region a political bedrock of Thailand's populist movement.

That dominance, however, is showing signs of strain. As the upcoming election approaches, many voters say their allegiance is no longer guaranteed. Instead of voting strictly along party lines, they are increasingly weighing the personal influence, resources, and perceived effectiveness of individual candidates. Local networks, patronage ties, and promises of constituency-level development are playing a larger role in shaping voter preferences than in previous contests.

Political analysts note that this shift reflects broader changes in Thailand's political landscape. Repeated cycles of political upheaval, military interventions, and court rulings against Thaksin-linked parties have altered voter expectations. Some rural voters express frustration that despite decades of loyalty, their economic circumstances have not improved as much as promised. Others say younger voters are less attached to historic political loyalties and more willing to experiment with alternatives.

Philippine Vice President Sara Duterte Faces Fresh Impeachment Complaints

METRO MELINA

Philippine Vice President Sara Duterte faced another round of impeachment complaints on Monday, intensifying political pressure on one of the country's most prominent leaders. Rights groups and activist organizations filed the complaints, accusing Duterte of betraying public trust, corruption, and other alleged crimes, claims her office has consistently denied in the past.

Duterte, the daughter of former president Rodrigo Duterte, remains a powerful figure in Philippine politics and is widely regarded as a frontrunner for the 2028 presidential election. The renewed impeachment push comes despite her having survived similar efforts last year, highlighting persistent opposition from civil society groups critical of her leadership and political influence.

In 2025, lawmakers attempted to initiate impeachment proceedings against Duterte, but the effort ultimately failed after the Supreme Court of the Philippines struck down the bid. The court ruled that the move violated constitutional safeguards, reinforcing the high legal threshold required to remove a sitting vice president from office. That decision was widely seen as a significant legal victory for Duterte and a setback for her critics.

The latest complaints accuse Duterte of actions that allegedly undermine democratic accountability and good governance. Rights advocates argue that impeachment is necessary to uphold constitutional principles and ensure transparency among the country's top officials. Activists staging protests alongside the filing of the complaints said the process itself, even if unsuccessful, serves as a public reckoning of alleged abuses of power.

TAKAICHI POLL LANDSLIDE

Poll Predicts Landslide Win for Takaichi's Party

TOKYO

Japan's political landscape appears set for continuity as Prime Minister Sanae Takaichi and her ruling party head into next week's lower house election with strong momentum. A survey published by the Asahi Shimbun indicates that Takaichi's party is likely to secure a commanding victory, significantly exceeding the threshold required for a parliamentary majority.

According to the poll, Takaichi's Liberal Democratic Party is projected to well surpass the 233-seat majority mark in the 465-member lower house. If realized, this would represent a notable increase from its current 198 seats, consolidating the prime minister's grip on party leadership and strengthening her authority within government. A decisive win on Sunday would provide a clear mandate for Takaichi's expansionary fiscal agenda, centered on large-scale public spending and tax reductions aimed at sustaining economic growth.

Supporters argue that continued fiscal stimulus is necessary to maintain momentum in an economy grappling with demographic challenges and global uncertainty. However, economists and market participants are increasingly voicing concerns about the longer-term implications for Japan's public finances, already among the most strained in the developed world.

Ryutaro Kono, chief Japan economist at BNP Paribas, warned that implementing expansionary fiscal policy when the economy is near full employment could have significant side effects. Such a policy stance, he said, would heighten inflationary pressures and further weaken the yen, which has already faced downward pressure in recent months. Rising inflation expectations could, in turn, push government bond yields higher, increasing borrowing costs for the state.

These dynamics may also complicate monetary policy. Kono noted that the Bank of Japan could be forced to accelerate the pace of interest rate hikes to counter both currency weakness and inflation driven by fiscal expansion. Any shift toward tighter monetary conditions would mark a delicate balancing act for policymakers seeking to support growth while maintaining financial stability.

Harmanpreet, Smriti, Divya among nominees for 2025 BBC Sports Awards

Cricket leaders and young stars headline prestigious BBC Indian Sportswoman shortlist

NEW DELHI

Indian women's sport continues its golden run as cricket captain Harmanpreet Kaur, vice-captain Smriti Mandhana and chess prodigy Divya Deshmukh have been nominated for the 2025 BBC Indian Sportswoman of the Year Awards. Pistol shooter Suruchi Singh and track and field athlete Jyothi Yarraji complete the five-member shortlist for the prestigious annual honour.

The nominations recognise outstanding performances across disciplines in 2025, a year that witnessed several landmark achievements for Indian women athletes on the global stage.

Harmanpreet led from the front in India's historic ICC Women's World Cup triumph in November 2025, the country's maiden title in the tournament. Playing on home soil, she produced a match-winning 89 in the semi-final against Australia while chasing a daunting target. Her leadership and big-match temperament once again underlined her status as one of India's finest cricketers. Harmanpreet has previously featured in Time magazine's Top 100 Emerging Leaders list and BBC's 100 Most Inspiring Women.

Smriti Mandhana, already regarded as one of the most elegant batters of her generation, continued to scale new heights. The left-hander holds the second-highest number of ODI centuries among active players and smashed the fastest ODI hundred by an Indian last year. A two-time ICC Women's Cricketer of the Year, Mandhana's consistency remains central to India's success. In chess, 20-year-old Divya Deshmukh scripted history by becoming the youngest and first Indian winner of the FIDE Women's World Cup in 2025, earning the grandmaster title in the process. Her rise symbolised a new era for Indian chess.

Shooter Suruchi Singh impressed with a golden treble at ISSF World Cups, while hurdler Jyothi Yarraji continued to rewrite national records and dominate Asian competitions.

According to the BBC, the athletes were shortlisted by an eminent jury after evaluating performances over the past year, celebrating excellence and inspiration in Indian women's sport.

Hazlewood won't join Aus squad early in T20 WC: Selector Dodemaide

Pacer continues rehabilitation at home, to link up with team later

SYDNEY

Australian fast bowler Josh Hazlewood will not travel with the national squad for the early part of the ICC T20 World Cup in Sri Lanka as he continues his rehabilitation from injury, national selector Tony Dodemaide said.

Hazlewood will remain in Sydney during the opening phase of the tournament, which begins on February 7, to continue his return-to-play programme in familiar conditions. Australia's first four preliminary matches will be played in Colombo and Pallekele, starting February 11 against Ireland.

"Nathan, Tim and Glenn have arrived in Colombo and we look forward to meeting up with them when we arrive from Pakistan," Dodemaide said. "With Josh, we felt it was more practical and beneficial for him to continue his rehabilitation at home before travelling to Sri Lanka."

The trio of Nathan Ellis, Tim David and Glenn Maxwell have already reached Colombo and will join the rest of the squad on Tuesday. Sean Abbott has been added to the touring party as a travelling reserve, primarily as fast-bowling cover.

Hazlewood was earlier ruled out of the 2025-26 Ashes series after suffering a lingering Achilles injury during his recovery from a previous hamstring strain. Dodemaide did not specify when the senior pacer would be available to feature in the World Cup.

Australia's group-stage campaign will conclude on February 20, with Oman, Sri Lanka and Zimbabwe rounding out their preliminary group alongside Ireland.

The Australian pace attack has already been dealt a blow with skipper Pat Cummins ruled out of the entire tournament due to a persistent back injury. Cummins has been replaced in the 15-man squad by left-arm seamer Ben Dwarshuis.

Explaining Abbott's inclusion, Dodemaide said he would provide insurance for Ellis, who is also completing his return from injury. "Sean is an accomplished and versatile international player who has experienced numerous World Cup campaigns. It made sense for him to stay with the group following the Pakistan tour," he said.

The T20 World Cup will be staged across venues in India and Sri Lanka from February 7 to March 8.

Politics and security concerns have earlier forced teams to forfeit World Cup games

Past instances of teams forfeiting matches in ICC events

NEW DELHI

Pakistan's decision to boycott its marquee ICC T20 World Cup group match against India has once again brought politics into sharp focus in international cricket.

While the move could invite serious repercussions and possible sanctions from the International Cricket Council (ICC), history shows this is not the first time teams have forfeited matches in ICC events due to non-cricketing reasons.

Cricket may be known as the "gentleman's game", but global tournaments have often been affected by political tensions, diplomatic disputes and security concerns. There have been four notable instances in the past where World Cup matches were forfeited, altering the course of major ICC events.

1996 World Cup: Australia vs Sri Lanka

The 1996 World Cup, co-hosted by India, Pakistan and Sri Lanka, was overshadowed by security fears. Sri Lanka was facing internal unrest, and a bomb explosion weeks before the tournament heightened concerns. Australia refused to travel to Colombo for their group match and forfeited the game, conceding points. Ironically, Australia later played Sri Lanka in the final at Lahore, where the island nation clinched its maiden World Cup title.

1996 World Cup: West Indies vs Sri Lanka

Following Australia's decision, the West Indies also declined to tour Sri Lanka and forfeited their group match. Despite the setback, the West Indies reached the semifinals, where they suffered a dramatic defeat to Australia after being in a strong position. In a show of regional solidarity, India and Pakistan even fielded a combined team in a friendly against Sri Lanka before the tournament.

2003 World Cup: England vs Zimbabwe

The 2003 World Cup, hosted by South Africa, Zimbabwe and Kenya, saw England refuse to travel to Harare due to diplomatic tensions between the UK government and the Robert Mugabe administration. England forfeited the match, while Zimbabwe players Andy Flower and Henry Olonga made global headlines by wearing black armbands to protest the political situation in their country.

2003 World Cup: New Zealand vs Kenya

In the same tournament, New Zealand declined to play in Nairobi citing security concerns following a deadly suicide bomb attack in Mombasa. The ICC rejected New Zealand's request to shift the match, leading to another forfeiture.

These episodes underline how external factors have repeatedly disrupted ICC events, making Pakistan's current decision part of a troubled historical pattern.

BCCI backs ICC warning to Pakistan over India match boycott: Rajeev Shukla

NEW DELHI

The Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) on Monday backed the International Cricket Council's decision to warn Pakistan over its proposed boycott of the high-profile T20 World Cup group match against India, scheduled to be played in Colombo on February 15. BCCI vice-president Rajeev Shukla said the Indian board fully agreed with the ICC's emphasis on sportsmanship and would refrain from making further comments until formal discussions with the global body.

"The ICC has issued a big statement on this subject. It has highlighted the element of sportsmanship. We completely agree with the ICC. BCCI will not make any comment until we speak to the ICC," Shukla told reporters.

Pakistan's decision, communicated through an official government statement, is being viewed as a political protest following a series of contentious developments surrounding the tournament. The ICC has already cautioned the Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB) that a selective pull-out from the marquee fixture could invite punitive sanctions, stressing that such a move is not in the broader interests of the game.

The controversy has been further fuelled by diplomatic tensions in the region and earlier disputes involving Bangladesh, including the removal of pacer Mustafizur Rahman from the Indian Premier League. Congress MP Shashi Tharoor criticised the politicisation of sport, calling the situation "disgraceful" and urging all parties to step back from escalating the standoff.

Indian board endorses ICC stand, awaits further discussions before commenting further

The India-Pakistan clash is traditionally the most watched fixture in any ICC tournament, commanding massive global audiences and significant commercial interest. Broadcasters and sponsors are believed to be facing potential losses estimated between Rs 200 crore and Rs 250 crore if the match does not go ahead as scheduled.

Pakistan are set to begin their T20 World Cup campaign against the Netherlands on February 7, with all their group matches slated to be played in Colombo.

Karnataka pull off a heist to enter quarters

BENGALURU

There are red-ball games that unfold slowly before bursting into life late, and Karnataka's Ranji Trophy Elite Group B clash against Punjab was a classic case. What appeared to be a tame draw for most of four days transformed into a breathtaking finish as Karnataka chased down 250 in just 27.3 overs to seal a quarterfinal berth at the IS Bindra Stadium in Mohali.

Led by skipper Devdutt Padikkal, who struck a sensational unbeaten 120 off just 85 balls, Karnataka completed a five-wicket win that will be remembered as one of the boldest fourth-innings chases in recent Ranji history. The result ensured Karnataka finished second in Group B with 27 points from seven matches — three wins, three draws and one loss — just a point behind group toppers Madhya Pradesh.

The victory also marked a strong start to a new leadership phase, easing the pressure after a damaging defeat to MP earlier had left qualification hanging by a thread. Karnataka will now face Mumbai in the fourth quarterfinal, starting February 6.

Set an improbable target within a time frame of around 40 overs, Karnataka went all-in from the start. Padikkal promoted himself to open alongside KL Rahul, signalling clear intent. Though Rahul fell early, Padikkal and former skipper Mayank Agarwal counter-attacked brilliantly, adding 113 runs in just 76 balls. Agarwal's brisk 53 kept the momentum alive before a brief wobble threatened to derail the chase.

Padikkal then found support from Shreyas Gopal, and later Vidyadhar Patil, to calmly see Karnataka home at 252/5.

Earlier, Punjab captain Uday Saharan played a resolute knock of 93 to push his side to 256, but Karnataka's bowlers wrapped up the tail swiftly after lunch. The daring chase that followed turned a tense contest into a stunning heist, underlining Karnataka's knockout pedigree once again.

Alcaraz plans a kangaroo tattoo to remember Australian Open victory

MELBOURNE

Fresh off completing a historic career Grand Slam, Carlos Alcaraz says he is considering getting a kangaroo tattoo as a permanent reminder of his Australian Open triumph. The 22-year-old Spaniard sealed his place in tennis history on Sunday by defeating Novak Djokovic in the men's singles final, becoming the youngest male player to win all four major titles.

"I already know it's going to be a kangaroo. I just don't know the place," Alcaraz said on Monday, a day after lifting the Norman Brookes Challenge Cup. "I'm thinking about the leg, but I don't know which calf — the right or the left."

Alcaraz posed with the trophy at the Royal Exhibition Building in central Melbourne, cutting a relaxed figure in black attire, loafers and no socks. According to Australian media reports, he celebrated the night of his victory quietly with family, ordering pizza, beer and champagne at his hotel.

Reflecting on the final, where he rallied to beat 10-time Australian Open champion Djokovic 2-6, 6-2, 6-3, 7-5, Alcaraz admitted the emotions nearly overwhelmed him. "Before the last point, a lot of things came to my mind. I was really nervous, I was shaking," he said. "Once I saw the ball go out, I was like, 'Alright, I made it.'"

The win placed Alcaraz in an elite group, joining Don Budge, Fred Perry, Roy Emerson, Rod Laver, Andre Agassi, Roger Federer, Rafael Nadal and Djokovic as only the ninth man to complete a career Grand Slam. He achieved the feat younger than all of them, even Budge.

With the milestone achieved, Alcaraz has already set new goals.

'Let's call off this nonsense': Tharoor on Pakistan's India match boycott

NEW DELHI

Congress Member of Parliament Shashi Tharoor on Monday strongly criticised Pakistan's decision to boycott its high-profile ICC T20 World Cup group match against India, calling the move "pretty disgraceful" and urging all stakeholders to keep politics out of cricket.

Reacting to Pakistan's refusal to travel to India for the marquee clash, Tharoor said the current impasse should never have arisen and warned that the politicisation of sport was spiralling out of control. The four-time MP, a self-confessed cricket enthusiast, also stressed the need for greater transparency and dialogue in resolving issues beyond the boundary.

"It's pretty disgraceful that sport has been politicised in this way on both sides, frankly. I don't think that Mustafizur should have been denied his contract to play in Kolkata. It was a most unfortunate intrusion of politics," Tharoor was quoted as saying.

Pakistan's stance is widely being seen as an act of solidarity with Bangladesh, which was dropped from the tournament after refusing to send its team to India citing security concerns. The situation escalated following the ouster of Bangladeshi pacer Mustafizur Rahman from the Indian Premier League, a move that triggered diplomatic and sporting fallout in the region.

Congress MP urges depoliticising cricket amid Pakistan's decision to forfeit marquee clash

While Tharoor felt Bangladesh's response was an overreaction, he said Pakistan's subsequent decision had only compounded the crisis. "This whole thing is spiralling out of control," he remarked, adding that cricket should serve as a bridge between nations rather than a battleground for political disputes.

Following Pakistan's boycott announcement, the International Cricket Council issued a stern warning, cautioning that the move could have long-term repercussions and urging the Pakistan Cricket Board to explore a mutually acceptable solution.

Calling it a wake-up call, Tharoor appealed for immediate dialogue. "Sports, especially cricket which means so much to people, should bring us together at least on the playing field.

The ICC could be the platform for urgent talks. Let's just call off this nonsense. You can't go on like this forever," he said.

The India-Pakistan clash remains the most anticipated fixture of any ICC event, and uncertainty over it continues to cast a shadow over the tournament.

Commodities Slide Sharply as Kevin Warsh Fed Pick Triggers Risk-Off

Singapore

Commodities markets suffered a sharp sell-off on Monday, led by steep losses in precious metals, oil, and industrial metals, as investors reassessed risk following the choice of Kevin Warsh as the next chair of the Federal Reserve. The prospect of a more hawkish monetary policy stance triggered a broad retreat from risk assets, sending prices tumbling for a second consecutive session. Gold bore the brunt of the sell-off, sliding around 9% to its lowest level in more than two weeks. The decline marked a dramatic reversal after bullion had surged to record highs just last week, driven by expectations of looser monetary conditions and persistent geopolitical uncertainty. Silver fared even worse, plunging more than 13% as investors rushed to lock in profits after the metal's recent rally to historic peaks.

Asian Shares Slide as Precious Metals Rout Spooks Markets Ahead

Mumbai

Asian share markets followed Wall Street futures deep into negative territory on Monday, as violent selling in precious metals unsettled investors at the start of a week packed with corporate earnings, central bank meetings, and key economic data. The sharp moves underscored fragile market sentiment after last week's dramatic reversal in commodities spilled over into broader risk assets. Equity markets across the Asia-Pacific region opened lower, tracking steep losses in U.S. futures tied to Wall Street. Traders said the scale and speed of the sell-off in precious metals, particularly silver, had injected a fresh dose of anxiety into markets already bracing for major policy signals and earnings guidance from global companies.

Clash Over Cocoa Spin-Off Led to Departure of Barry Callebaut CEO Peter Feld

Zurich

Barry Callebaut, the world's largest chocolate maker, parted ways with its former chief executive Peter Feld last month following an internal clash over strategy, according to two sources familiar with the matter. The disagreement, which had not been previously reported, centered on a proposal to separate the company's cocoa business from its broader chocolate operations. The Swiss-based group, Barry Callebaut, supplies chocolate and cocoa products to food manufacturers and confectionery brands worldwide. Feld, who had been leading the company during a period of volatile cocoa prices and supply disruptions, reportedly pushed for a structural split that would carve out the cocoa division as a standalone business.

AI, Drones and Sensors Transform Spanish Farms With EU Fund

Across Spain, EU-funded sensors and drones are powering AI tools to modernise farming and cut emissions.

PARIS

In olive groves and vineyards spread across Spain, a quiet technological shift is underway. Sensors buried in soil and drones flying overhead are collecting vast amounts of data, feeding artificial intelligence models designed to help farmers manage crops more efficiently and sustainably. The technology, paid for by Europe's largest recovery programme since the post-war Marshall Plan, aims to modernise agriculture while reducing its environmental footprint.

The initiative is part of the European Union's €955-billion Next Generation recovery fund, agreed six years ago in the aftermath of the COVID-19 pandemic. The fund, formally known as Next Generation EU, was created to revive economies, accelerate the green transition and push digital transformation across the bloc. As final payout deadlines approach, projects like these Spanish farming pilots are increasingly cited as examples of the fund's intended impact.

In regions heavily dependent on agriculture, farmers are using real-time data on soil moisture, temperature, nutrient levels and plant health to make more precise decisions about irrigation, fertiliser use and harvesting. AI-driven models analyse the information and provide recommendations, helping growers reduce water consumption, cut costs and limit emissions linked to over-fertilisation and inefficient energy use.

The focus on agriculture reflects its importance to Spain's economy, as well as the challenges it faces from climate change. Rising temperatures, prolonged droughts and unpredictable weather patterns have placed increasing pressure on farmers, particularly in olive oil and wine-producing regions. EU officials say digital tools can help make farms more resilient while supporting the bloc's climate targets.

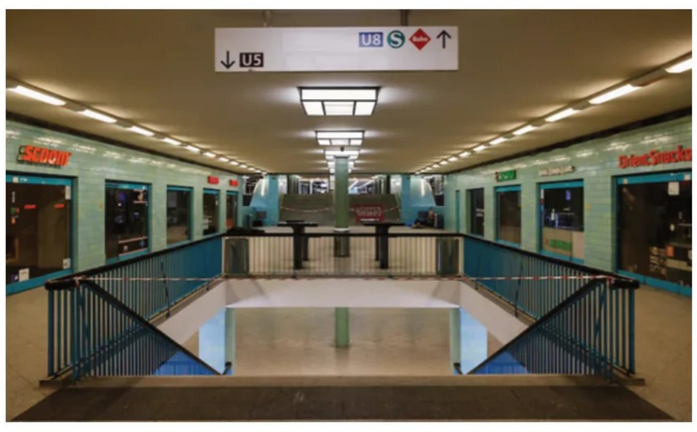
European policymakers have repeatedly stressed that the recovery fund is not simply about short-term stimulus. Instead, it is designed to reshape key sectors for the long term by pairing decarbonisation with digitalisation. Agriculture, often seen as traditional and slow to adopt new technologies, has emerged as a testing ground for how innovation can be scaled with public funding.

However, challenges remain. Some small farmers worry about the cost of maintaining advanced systems once subsidies end, while others point to gaps in digital skills in rural areas. EU and national authorities say training programmes and cooperative models are being developed to ensure the technology is accessible beyond large commercial operations.

Tens of thousands of German transport workers went on strike, leaving commuters stranded amid freezing temperatures nationwide.

Germany Hit by Nationwide Transport Strike as Verdi Walkout Halts Buses and Trams

BERLIN



Commuters across Germany faced widespread disruption on Monday as tens of thousands of public transport workers walked off the job in a nationwide strike called by the trade union Verdi. The walkout shut down bus and tram services in most cities, leaving empty platforms and forcing travelers to seek alternative means of transport during freezing morning conditions.

Verdi, which represents nearly 100,000 public transport workers, announced the strike after negotiations with municipal and state employers over working conditions broke down last week. The union is pressing for shorter shifts, longer rest breaks, and higher pay for night and weekend work, arguing that the current demands placed on drivers and operational staff are unsustainable. Employers, however, have pointed to mounting budget constraints faced by cities already struggling with rising energy costs and inflation.

The industrial action affected around 150 municipal transport companies across all but one of Germany's 16 federal states. Major urban centers including Berlin, Hamburg, and Bremen were among those where buses and trams remained largely idle throughout the day. In many cities, local authorities advised residents to work from home if possible or allow extra time for travel.

Union officials described the strike as one of the largest coordinated actions in the local transport sector in years. The strike began as planned, said Serat Canyurt, Verdi's lead negotiator, in an interview with rbb radio on Monday. He added that the scale of the walkout was intended to send a clear signal to employers and force them back to the negotiating table.

Municipal employers expressed disappointment over the disruption but maintained that meeting all of Verdi's demands would put additional strain on already stretched public finances. Some warned that higher labor costs could ultimately lead to fare increases or reduced services in the long term.

For passengers, the strike was the latest reminder of growing labor tensions across Germany, where unions in several sectors have stepped up industrial action to protect wages and working conditions amid high living costs. Analysts say further strikes cannot be ruled out if talks fail to resume soon.

Union Budget empty on key issues, high on optics: Congress MP

NEW DELHI

Congress MP Gurjeet Singh Aujla on Monday criticised the Union Budget 2026, alleging that the government has presented data only for media hype and failed to address key issues affecting the country. Speaking to IANS, Gurjeet Singh Aujla said that the budget offers no concrete solutions to the growing problem of unemployment.

In this budget, there is no solution for unemployment. There is no serious discussion on industry or how it will take the country forward. The allocation for health and education is very low. Can the government honestly say that the education system across the country is doing very well? Overall, the government has presented data only to create media hype, he said.

The Congress MP further claimed that the budget lacks substance and fails to deliver real benefits to the people.

There is nothing in the Budget in reality. It is an empty budget, and there is nothing for Punjab. Prime Minister Narendra Modi was in Punjab yesterday, but he went empty-handed and returned empty-handed, Aujla told IANS.

Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman presented the Union Budget 2026, marking her ninth consecutive budget presentation. The Finance Minister stated that the Budget was inspired by three 'kartavyas' or responsibilities aimed at accelerating and sustaining economic growth by enhancing competitiveness, fulfilling aspirations, and ensuring that every family, community, and region has access to resources and opportunities for participation.

Commenting on Pakistan's decision to boycott its T20 World Cup match against India, Aujla said that India should take a firm stand.

I think India should boycott Pakistan first. We keep talking about Operation Sindoor and how it is progressing, yet matches are still being played. If Pakistan is boycotting the match, it shows they have already accepted defeat at the first stage. This decision should now be taken by the BCCI and Jay Shah, he said.

At 93, E Sreedharan pushes ahead with Kerala High-Speed Rail vision

MALAPPURAM

Undeterred by age, Metro Man E. Sreedharan on Monday reaffirmed his determination to see the proposed high-speed rail project for Kerala become a reality, inaugurating the project's official office at 9 a.m. at Ponnani in Malappuram, close to the residence where he currently lives. The inauguration was marked by a simple yet symbolic ceremony, with his wife taking the lead in lighting the traditional lamp, underscoring the personal commitment behind the ambitious initiative.

At 93, Sreedharan remains resolute that he will continue to work as a professional master builder, staying true to the vocation that has defined his life and produced some of the country's most iconic infrastructure projects.

Speaking on the occasion, Sreedharan said the absence of any mention of the project in the Union Budget would not dampen his resolve.

He expressed firm confidence that approval from the Railway Ministry would eventually come, stressing that the infrastructure of this scale requires perseverance and clarity of purpose.

In the initial phase, the newly opened office will function as a public interface to address doubts and concerns surrounding the project.

From February 15, a series of meetings will be held to explain the technical, financial and social aspects of the high-speed rail corridor to the public.

The first round of meetings will begin in Malappuram, after which similar outreach programmes will be organised in other districts through which the proposed alignment will pass.

Sreedharan also said that his discussions with the Union Railway Minister on January 16 were productive.

According to him, the Minister has instructed that the Detailed Project Report (DPR) be prepared, and an official order authorising the Delhi Metro Rail Corporation (DMRC) to undertake this task is expected within three to four days.

Musk's Empire Eyes a Smaller First Step as SpaceX Nears IPO and Considers xAI Deal

WASHINGTON

As Elon Musk's companies face pivotal transitions, supporters of a Musk mega-merger are urging a more cautious start.

For years, fans of Elon Musk and Musk himself have floated the idea of Musk Inc, a sweeping merger that would unite the billionaire's far-flung businesses under one corporate umbrella. The concept has ranged from serious strategic speculation to online fantasy. Now, as Musk's empire enters a critical phase, even some long-time proponents of a grand conglomerate are calling for a more incremental approach.

The shift in thinking comes as SpaceX is expected to go public later this year, a milestone that would subject the rocket maker to greater scrutiny from investors and regulators. At the same time, Tesla is navigating a difficult transition from its core electric vehicle business toward an ambitious future centered on robotaxis and humanoid robots. That transformation has raised questions about near-term profitability, capital allocation, and execution risk.

Against this backdrop, Reuters reported on Thursday that SpaceX is close to a deal to acquire xAI, Musk's artificial intelligence venture. Such a move would represent a far smaller and more focused step than a full-blown merger of Musk's companies, but one with potentially far-reaching implications.

According to the report, the acquisition would help pave the way for Musk's plans to develop data centers in space — an idea he has promoted as a solution to the enormous power demands of advanced AI systems. Musk has argued that space-based infrastructure, potentially powered by solar energy, could offer a cleaner and more scalable alternative to Earth-bound data centers that strain electrical grids and water resources.

Supporters of a broader Musk conglomerate see the potential SpaceX-xAI tie-up as a logical starting point. SpaceX's satellite and launch capabilities could complement xAI's computing ambitions, creating synergies without immediately entangling Tesla or other Musk-controlled firms such as X, formerly Twitter. Start where the technological overlap is strongest, one investor familiar with Musk-linked companies said, adding that public markets may be more comfortable with incremental integration than an all-at-once merger.

Skeptics, however, warn that even a smaller deal could raise governance and conflict-of-interest concerns, particularly once SpaceX becomes a publicly traded company. Investors are likely to scrutinize how resources are shared across Musk's ventures and whether strategic decisions primarily benefit shareholders or advance Musk's personal vision.

RBI Likely to Pause Rate Cuts as MPC Focuses on Liquidity and Market Stability

NEW DELHI

The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) is set to convene its Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) meeting from February 4 to 6, with economists widely expecting a pause in further policy rate cuts. Instead of additional easing, analysts say the central bank is likely to rely on targeted measures to manage liquidity conditions, ensure bond market stability and mitigate currency-related risks.

The RBI has already delivered substantial monetary easing over the past year, cutting the repo rate by a cumulative 125 basis points since February 2025. This has brought the benchmark policy rate down to 5.25%, aimed at supporting economic growth amid global uncertainty and moderating inflation pressures. However, after the most recent rate cut in December 2025, economists believe the MPC will now adopt a more cautious stance.

Market participants expect the Monetary Policy Committee to assess the impact of past rate reductions before deciding on any further moves. With transmission of earlier cuts still working through the banking system, policymakers are seen as reluctant to risk overstimulating the economy or destabilising financial markets.

Attention is therefore likely to shift toward liquidity management tools, such as open market operations and variable rate repos, to address pockets of tightness or excess cash in the system. Analysts also expect the RBI to keep a close watch on government bond yields, which can come under pressure due to global interest rate volatility and heavy borrowing requirements. Maintaining orderly conditions in the bond market is considered crucial for both fiscal financing and overall financial stability.

Currency dynamics are another key consideration. With global capital flows sensitive to changes in interest rate differentials, the RBI may prefer to use targeted interventions rather than broad rate cuts to manage potential volatility in the rupee. Economists say this approach allows the central bank to respond flexibly without sending strong signals that could unsettle foreign investors.

Radhika Rao, Executive Director and Senior Economist at DBS Bank, said the government's fiscal stance reduces pressure on monetary policy to do more. With the government remaining on course its fiscal consolidation path, we don't expect any material impact on the direction of monetary policy, she noted.

LAST-GASP MBAPPÉ PENALTY WINS IT

French star delivers stoppage-time winner as Madrid stay close behind league leaders

MADRID

Kylian Mbappé once again proved decisive for Real Madrid, converting a dramatic penalty deep into second-half stoppage time to secure a 2-1 La Liga victory over Rayo Vallecano at the Santiago Bernabeu. The win moved Madrid back within a point of table-toppers Barcelona, who defeated Elche 3-1.

Mbappé calmly slotted home the spot-kick nearly 10 minutes into added time, sealing his eighth goal in five matches and sparking wild celebrations among the home supporters. Vinícius Júnior had earlier given Madrid the lead, while Jorge De Frutos struck Rayo's equaliser shortly after the break.

The result came as a much-needed response for Madrid following their 4-2 defeat to Benfica in the Champions League, a loss that pushed them out of the automatic qualification places for the round of 16. "We wanted to change the image after a tough Champions League defeat," said midfielder Federico Valverde. "I think we played a great game."

Madrid endured an early setback when Jude Bellingham was forced off just 10 minutes into the match with a left hamstring injury. The England international appeared emotional as he walked off, casting doubt over his availability for the Champions League playoff against Benfica.

Despite being jeered early on, Vinícius silenced the crowd in the 15th minute with a superb solo effort, beating two defenders before curling a shot into the top corner. Rayo responded after the interval through De Frutos, capitalising on a brief lapse in Madrid's defence.

Rayo's task became harder after Pathé Ciss was sent off in the 80th minute, and they finished the game with nine men following Pep Chavarría's late dismissal. Mbappé, who had earlier hit the crossbar from close range, made no mistake from the penalty spot after Brahim Díaz was fouled.

Coach Álvaro Arbeloa praised his side's resilience. "The players gave everything. We needed the fans, and together we achieved it," he said.

Rayo dropped to 17th place, just outside the relegation zone, after a fourth straight defeat in all competitions.

Atletico Madrid seal deal for Ademola Lookman

Spanish club move quickly to bolster attack ahead of decisive league run

MADRID

Atletico Madrid confirmed that they have reached an agreement with Serie A side Atalanta for the transfer of Nigeria forward Ademola Lookman. The Spanish club said the deal is subject to the player passing a medical examination and finalising the terms of his contract.

Lookman has already arrived in Madrid and is scheduled to undergo his medical on Monday, Atletico said in a brief statement, without disclosing the length of the contract or the transfer fee involved.

The 28-year-old forward has been one of Atalanta's most influential attackers since joining the club in 2022. Known for his pace, direct running and ability to play across the frontline, Lookman enjoyed a productive spell in Italy after earlier stints in England and Germany.

Before moving to Atalanta, Lookman featured in the Premier League with Fulham, Leicester City and Everton, and also spent time in the Bundesliga with RB Leipzig. His performances in Serie A helped raise his profile further, both at club level and on the international stage.

Lookman recently showcased his quality at the Africa Cup of Nations, scoring three goals for Nigeria and playing a key role in their campaign. His displays at the continental tournament are believed to have attracted interest from several European clubs, with Atletico moving swiftly to secure his signature.

The transfer comes as Atletico look to strengthen their attacking options midway through the season. Diego Simeone's side currently sit third in La Liga after 22 matches, nine points behind second-placed Real Madrid and 10 adrift of leaders Barcelona.

With the title race still alive and European commitments looming, Atletico are keen to add depth and firepower to their squad. They are scheduled to face Club Brugge in the Champions League playoffs later this month, and Lookman's arrival could provide a timely boost as the club balances domestic and continental ambitions.

Arsenal edge Corinthians in rain-soaked final to lift inaugural intercontinental trophy

Foord's extra-time goal gives Arsenal 3-2 win over Corinthians in first Women's Champions Cup

LONDON

Caitlin Foord struck a decisive extra-time goal as Arsenal defeated Brazil's Corinthians 3-2 to win the inaugural Women's Champions Cup, sealing a dramatic victory in a rain-lashed final at the Emirates Stadium.

Arsenal appeared on course for victory in regulation time before Corinthians forced extra time by equalising deep into stoppage time through a Victoria penalty. Foord then restored Arsenal's lead in the 104th minute with a composed breakaway finish to clinch the historic title. The six-team Women's Champions Cup, created as an intercontinental competition for elite women's club sides, brought together champions from across the globe. Arsenal qualified as winners of the UEFA Women's Champions League and took home $2.3 million for lifting the trophy, while Corinthians earned $1 million as runners-up.

Olivia Smith opened the scoring in the 15th minute after Corinthians goalkeeper Leticia parried a shot from Stina Blackstenius into her path. Corinthians responded six minutes later when veteran midfielder Gabriela Zanotti found the net, her effort crossing the line just before Arsenal goalkeeper Anneke Borbe could recover.

Arsenal regained control in the 58th minute as Lotte Wubben-Moy headed home from an Emily Fox cross, with FIFA president Gianni Infantino in attendance. The London side looked set to lift the cup until a late video review awarded Corinthians a penalty for a foul by Katie McCabe, which Victoria calmly converted in second-half stoppage time. Foord's extra-time strike ultimately proved decisive, though the match ended on a worrying note for Arsenal as Borbe was stretchered off following a late collision.

Earlier, Gotham FC claimed third place with a 4-0 win over Morocco's ASFAR. The Champions Cup serves as a precursor to FIFA's upcoming 16-team Women's Club World Cup, set to debut in 2028.

Anahat Singh stuns world No.10 Georgina Kennedy to clinch maiden PSA Bronze title

CHENNAI

Teenage squash sensation Anahat Singh produced the finest performance of her young career, defeating top seed and world No. 10 Georgina Kennedy of England 12-10, 11-5, 11-7 to win the Squash on Fire Open title in Washington on Monday.

The victory marked Anahat's maiden PSA Bronze-level crown and the biggest title so far for the 16-year-old Indian, who is currently ranked world No. 31. It was also her 15th overall title on the PSA Tour, achieved in just her 26th professional tournament — an impressive return that underlines her rapid rise in the sport.

Seeded seventh in the tournament, Anahat avenged her only previous loss to Kennedy with a display of maturity and tactical clarity well beyond her years. The opening game proved decisive as the Delhi youngster held her nerve after trailing 8-10, reeling off four consecutive points to snatch it 12-10. From there, Anahat grew in confidence and dictated rallies with her tight length and sharp attacking shots.

Kennedy, one of the most consistent performers on the women's tour, struggled to find answers as Anahat controlled the pace and capitalised on errors. The second game slipped away quickly for the English player, with Anahat racing to an 11-5 win. In the third, the Indian stayed composed under pressure, closing out the match 11-7 to seal a straight-games triumph.

"I'm extremely happy," Anahat said after the final. "I knew I wanted to do well in these events, get my ranking up and also put on a performance, and I'm glad I was able to do that this time."

The title is expected to give Anahat a significant boost in the rankings and adds momentum to her push toward breaking into the world's top 50 — a goal she has previously identified as a key target.

Already regarded as one of India's brightest prospects in squash, Anahat's latest success against a top-10 opponent signals her growing presence on the global stage.

ICE, Epstein files 'sad' distractions from Winter Olympics: IOC president

MILAN

International Olympic Committee (IOC) president Kirsty Coventry described questions surrounding U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) and the release of Jeffrey Epstein-related files as "sad" distractions from the Milan Cortina Winter Olympics, now less than a month away.

Speaking at a news conference in Milan, Coventry and other IOC officials were repeatedly pressed on issues tied to the United States, which has increasingly dominated the narrative ahead of the Feb. 6-22 Games. While declining to comment in detail, Coventry acknowledged that such controversies were diverting attention from the sporting spectacle.

"I think anything that is distracting from these Games is sad," Coventry said. "But we've learned over the many years there's always been something leading up to the Games — whether it was Zika, COVID — there has always been something."

Coventry said she remained confident that global attention would return to the athletes once competition begins. "When that opening ceremony happens and those athletes start competing, suddenly the world remembers the magic and the spirit that the Games have," she added. Her comments came a day after hundreds of demonstrators gathered in Milan to protest the deployment of ICE agents during the Olympics. Authorities have said the agents will be stationed in a control room and will not operate on the streets.

Coventry also faced questions about newly released government files linked to Epstein, which include 2003 emails involving Casey Wasserman, head of the Los Angeles 2028 Olympics organizing committee, and Ghislaine Maxwell. She said the IOC would not comment further, noting that Wasserman had already issued a statement.

Two IOC members were mentioned in the documents, though there is no suggestion of wrongdoing. Coventry said the IOC was monitoring reports and would review information as needed.

Efforts underway to bring Formula One racing back to India

NEW DELHI

After more than a decade, the Indian government is actively working to bring Formula 1 back to the Buddh International Circuit in Greater Noida. Officials are addressing tax and regulatory issues that led to the Indian Grand Prix's cancellation after 2013. The race, held from 2011 to 2013, gained global attention, with Sebastian Vettel winning all three editions. However, high taxes, customs duties, and financial losses forced its exit. Talks with Formula 1 Management are now reportedly underway to secure a slot on the crowded F1 calendar. India's growing automotive market adds commercial appeal, though competition from other host nations remains a challenge.

WIJK AAN ZEE

World champion D Gukesh was held to a draw by Hans Moke Niemann in the 12th and penultimate round of the Tata Steel Masters as Nodirbek Abdusattorov surged ahead with a commanding victory to move within touching distance of the title. Abdusattorov regained sole leadership with a crushing win over Germany's Matthias Bluebaum, taking his tally to eight points and opening a half-point gap over compatriot Javokhir Sindarov. Sindarov chose safety over ambition against R Praggnanandhaa, settling for a draw that left him second on 7.5 points and raised the prospect of an Uzbek domination in the season's first super-tournament.

Gukesh, playing with the black pieces, was involved in a wild and tactical encounter against Niemann. The American sacrificed material in a position that did not fully justify the risk, giving Gukesh chances to press home his advantage. However, inaccuracies from the Indian allowed Niemann to escape, and the game eventually petered out into a draw. With six points, Gukesh is now joint eighth alongside Dutchman Anish Giri.

Abdusattorov's win was a model of precision. Striking decisively on the queenside, the Uzbek star combined his queen and knight to weave a tactical net that Bluebaum could not break, underlining why he remains one of the most feared players in elite tournaments.

Behind the leaders, Niemann, Jorden van Foreest and Vincent Keymer share third place on seven points each. Turkish prodigy Yagiz Kaan Erdogmus continued to impress, crushing Vladimir Fedoseev in another decisive outing. In a rare moment of shared amusement, Erdogmus delivered checkmate just a move before Fedoseev could do the same, both players smiling at the dramatic finish.
